

Council Recommends Raising Ceiling Price of Wood In The Village

Representative of Department of Munitions and Supply Interviewed Reeve West

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board will be asked to raise the ceiling price on wood in Stirling to the level in Belleville and Trenton, as the result of a resolution passed unanimously by council at the regular monthly meeting on Monday night.

Introducing the subject for discussion Reeve Wm. C. West, stated that T. J. Davison, a representative of the Department of Munitions and Supply, of Brockville, had interviewed him on the fuel situation in the village, and on being advised of local conditions had suggested that council make a recommendation along the above lines to the Board. The suggestion that the council purchase a woodlot and secure a dealer's permit was also advanced. The consensus of council was that the proposed change in the ceiling price would result in more wood being offered local residents.

Wm. Fitchett interviewed council in respect to the water service at his residence on Emily St. "Although there was no written contract, it was understood that Mr. Fitchett would receive $90 for the lot on which the present village well is located and free water service for five years," stated Councillor Stapley. "In that case the Village has fulfilled its obligations," added Councillor Bailey. Councillors Rollins and Thompson agreed and on motion it was decided that Mr. Fitchett be charged with the service charge, one toilet and one tap in the kitchen until the matter was further investigated.

Constable S. Eggleton gave a report on the collection of outstanding dog taxes, showing all but nine paid. He was instructed by council to proceed to collect from the remainder.

The results of the survey of the village water services by Carl Conley were tabled, showing several instances where two families were being served from one service. This is contrary to the regulations and the billing department will be advised accordingly.

The arrangements for Armistice Day Service at the Cenotaph, on November 11th, were left in the hands of Reeve West.

The motor for the stoker in the Community Building was reported burned out and council authorized F. E. Sprentall to order a new one, while the property committee was given the job of getting a supply of wood for the library.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

S. Bowen, cemetery, $36.00; S. Bowen, streets, $19.90; Mrs. E. T. Ward, care of memorial park, $35.00; J. McPaul, cemetery, $6.00; W. L. Anderson, selecting jurors, $4.00; W. C. West, selecting jurors, $4.00; Geo. H. Luery, selecting jurors, $4.00; Dept. of Health, $73; Twp. of Rawdon, taxes, $214; Stirling Hydro, $190.57; Stirling Waterworks, $120.84.

Reeve West presided over the meeting and all members of council were in attendance.

Local Soldier Mentioned In Story From Battlefield In Italy

Pte. Stanley Dainard, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dainard, of this village, has been mentioned in a despatch sent to the Toronto Telegram by Major Bert Wemp, Major Wemp, who has been visiting the troops in the front line in Italy, tells of the Hasty Pies capturing a town from the Germans, only to lose it again.

Major Wemp's story is as follows: I crossed to our right flank where the Hastings and Prince Edward, which had anticipated a quiet time today, had just finished the job of retaking a town which retreating German patrols had wheeled about and re-entered.

"Nobody can do that to us, so we smashed them properly," said Sgt. L. A. Price, of Bancroft, whose wife now lives at 118 Lawlor Ave., Toronto.

Saturday Next Is Poppy Day

Loan Purchases Still Too Few

Only 61 Per Cent. of Objective Reached In The District — Canvassers Active

With only two days remaining in the Victory Loan Campaign, Stirling and Rawdon district is still far from attaining its objective. Figures released by County Victory Loan Headquarters this (Thursday) morning show a total of $194,100 subscribed, or only 61 per cent of the objective.

Our boys and girls have responded nobly to our country's call. They have given up lives of security and comfort in exchange for the life of a soldier, airman, sailor, nurse or other positions necessary to release men to fight.

Our banks have the money on deposit to put the loan over the top. It is now strictly up to us to see that the objective is reached.

Hastings County total is $2,800,000. Local canvassers are working hard to make the objective and all who have not purchased a bond or feel they can do more, should get in touch with a canvasser or the bank at once. Let's "Speed the Victory" by buying another bond.

Additional Teacher Needed To Cope With Increase In Attendance

The Beginners' Class Will Be Moved To Room On The Third Storey Of High School

The Board of Education is faced with the problem of securing another teacher to cope with the increasing attendance at the Stirling Public School. Since opening day in September, the enrolment has been 163, which not only over-taxed the seating capacity of the building, but placed a severe strain on the four-teacher staff. Officials of the board were hopeful of getting along without hiring another teacher but the arrival of six additional pupils this week made such action imperative.

At a special meeting of the board last night to deal with the matter, it was decided to move the beginners class from the public school to the former assembly room on the upper floor in the High School, and place them in charge of a new teacher. This arrangement will leave 145 pupils in the public school divided as follows: 34 in room one; 34 in room two; 40 in room three and 37 in room four. The engagement of an additional teacher was left in the hands of the teachers' committee.

Dr. E. A. Carleton presided and Dr. C. F. Walt, N. E. Eggleton, Ewart Bailey, J. B. Belshaw, C. F. Linn, C. I. Hatton and H. R. Tompkins were present.

Fargey at the piano, choruses, games conducted by Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Fargey, and a short skit by several of the girls. Masquerade Dance Was A Success

A successful Hallowe'en dance was held in the community hall on Monday night, under the auspices of the local branch of the Women's Institute. Music was provided by Austin's Orchestra and the large crowd thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Refreshments were served at the midnight hour.

Anniversary Services At Bethel

Large congregations attended the Anniversary Services of the Bethel United Church, both morning and evening of October 24th.

The Rev. A. Poulter, of Madoc, brought inspiring and vital messages.

The local choir gave splendid leadership in the services of song. In the morning two anthems—"How Holy Is This Place", and "Wonderful"

"Praise Ye The Lord", by Mrs. Elliott, and Mrs. Walter Warren, taking solo parts. There was also a Quintette "Praise Ye The Lord", by Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Townsend, Miss A. English, Mr. John Coggins and Mr. Harry Heath.

At the evening service again there were two anthems—"How excellent Thy Name", and "Rock of Refuge". Mrs. T. F. Townsend contributed the solo, "Angel of Light Lead On."

Very satisfactory financial offerings were made. In the morning the speaker brought a heart searching challenge to increase in the things that are vital. At night the message was based on the worth and dependability of the four anchors—Faith—Hope—Endurance and Love in the days of strain and stress.

Late in the final quarter the locals were in scoring position when Jackman recovered a Tweed fumble about fifteen yards out from their goal line. The first two kicks were called back by Referee Moffatt for a Stirling offside and on the third down the locals, instead of kicking for the tying point, elected to try a forward pass play for a touchdown, and it was intercepted by a Tweed player. The winners booted out of danger and the final whistle went before the locals could get in scoring distance again.

The ball game was won along the wing line. Tweed had enough weight to open up gaping holes for their plunges when on the offensive and repeatedly charged through to break up the locals' plays before they got under way. D. Bastedo and B. Jackman, local outsiders tackled well but the remainder of the team were decidedly below form.

The Stirling line up—snap, Glen Haslett; insides, Roy Thompson, Jack Hermiston; middles, Geo. Reid, Grenville Sine; outsiders, Doug Bastedo, "Archie" Jackman; fullback, D. McIntosh; halves, Doug Patterson, Earl Haslett, Ray McLaren; quarterback, B. Bastedo.

T. Moffatt, Tweed, and C. A. Wells, officiated.

Tweed Defeated High School

Locals Lose First Game of Season 7 To 6 — Must Beat Madoc In Game Next Week

A superior wing line, plus some questionable strategy on the part of the locals, enabled the Tweed High School to defeat the Stirling squad 7 to 6 on the school campus, Friday afternoon. As a result of their loss, the first of the season, the locals must now defeat Madoc in next week's game to avoid a playoff for the championship.

Tweed opened the scoring in the opening minutes of the first quarter when they intercepted a lateral from Patterson on a run-back of the opening kick-off and after two line plays failed, kicked for a point. A few minutes later they had the ball on the locals five-yard stripe and scored a touch on a forward pass, to make the count 6 to 1. The convert was missed. Tweed were completely outplaying the locals at this stage of the game, using a short pass just over the scrimmage line with telling effect. It was not until half time that the locals figured out a defence for this play.

In the second quarter play was more even with each team scoring a point to make the score 7 to 1.

Stirling took the offensive at the opening of the second half and on a series of plunges and passes worked the ball to the Tweed 20-yard stripe, but lost the ball when they failed to make yards on an attempted forward on the third down. However they recovered the ball on the next play on a Tweed fumble and E. Haslett rounded the end for a touchdown. The convert by McIntosh, which would have tied the score, hit the crossbar. The final score of the quarter was 7 to 6.

Late in the final quarter the locals were in scoring position when Jackman recovered a Tweed fumble about fifteen yards out from their goal line. The first two kicks were called back by Referee Moffatt for a Stirling offside and on the third down the locals, instead of kicking for the tying point, elected to try a forward pass play for a touchdown, and it was intercepted by a Tweed player. The winners booted out of danger and the final whistle went before the locals could get in scoring distance again.

APPEAL FOR VOLUNTEERS

There can never be too much produced in Red Cross workrooms across the Dominion. There could be too little. Appealing to Canadian women to stick with the job and see it through, Mrs. Gladys E. Campbell, Chairman of the National Women's War Work Committee, said in a recent interview:

"There must be no slackening of effort now. Our troops are going forward. They must be kept supplied with Red Cross comforts and hospital needs. We need women to knit and sew as we have never needed them before.

If workrooms could be kept open in the evenings with a new "shift" of workers it would help," said Mrs. Campbell.

"It has come to the place where volunteers must put preference behind them and work at what happens to be the pressing need of the moment—no matter how mundane the task.

"We have come to a critical phase in Red Cross service. Let us stay with it, even as our men in the Armed Forces are staying with their job."

Stirling Red Cross is in urgent need of workers and your presence at the local workrooms on Friday afternoon of each week would be greatly appreciated.

REMEMBRANCE DAY—NOVEMBER 11th

The local Branch of the Canadian Legion is making its annual Poppy Day appeal to the people of this community on Saturday, November 6th. The Poppy Fund is now a recognized institution wherever the Canadian Legion exists in Canada, and it serves a two-fold purpose of much merit. The money which is raised by the distribution of the Poppy—the symbol of sacrifice—is used entirely to relieve unusual distress among War Veterans of the last War and the present conflict, and their families. At all times it has been found that the Veterans, in view of the fact that many of them have disabilities and handicaps, suffer even more than others who are out of employment, since many of them require special care and attention which they are unable to provide. This is where the Poppy Fund, raised through the sale of Poppies by the local Branch of the Legion, steps in and provides relief for the situation.

There is another reason why every citizen should wear a Poppy for Remembrance Day. These Poppies are manufactured in the Vets-craft shops of Canada, workshops in which they manufacture the hundreds of thousands of Poppies which are distributed every year at this time. By wearing a Poppy, citizens can find much satisfaction in knowing that they are helping these handicapped Veterans to obtain a livelihood which they would otherwise lack on account of their special disabilities.

This two-fold appeal should find a ready response in the hearts and minds of the people of this Community, which has always been ready to make the way easier for those of its Citizens who served Country and Empire in the Great War, and in this present conflict. We commend it to your sympathetic consideration, in the hope that you will respond generously and thus help to hold the torch flung to you by those who did not come back.

PROTECTING FARM MACHINERY

Now that the farmers have completed their work on the soil with the exception of plowing it is time that they had all their machinery under cover from the wet and cold weather. Nothing looks so bad as when one drives along the country roads and sees the different machines used by a farmer in his work left out in the open field or yard at the mercy of the elements. The business ability of the farmer is in no way more clearly indicated than by the condition of his tools. Allowing his machines to remain in the field where last used results in quick decay. Nothing so injures machinery as exposure to the weather. If an implement shed is not available, the machines should be assembled where they can be covered with temporary roofing to keep off the snow and ice. Any farmer can erect a frame to carry a roof. The two sides whence the storms approach should be closed. The protection thus afforded will amply repay the owner, while as an additional advantage, he will be able to utilize spare time in cleaning and painting his implements when close at hand and protected, which he could not do were they scattered over the farm.

PRICE CONTROL HELPS PRODUCERS, TOO

When H. H. Bloom, Administrator of Farm and Construction Machinery, remarked recently that, because of price control, Canada was the only country in the world in which a farmer can now buy new machinery at stabilized prices, fixed before inflationary influences could result in increases, he pointed to benefits conferred by that control which sometimes escape notice.

A good many producers have been disposed to inveigh against price control because it imposes a check upon the prices their products command in the market. Some of them would do away with price control altogether and allow prices to find what is called their natural level. But if that control should be wiped out, the manufactured and other articles that they are obliged to buy would also be affected and, having to pay more—perhaps much more—for these articles, their financial position would probably undergo no improvement whatever.

There can be little doubt that if price control should go, many, perhaps most, prices now under control would begin to soar and in the case of goods that are difficult to obtain, the sky would soon become the limit. That has been, of course, already the experience of various countries which have yet to apply price control as a wartime measure and in some of them the price of farm machinery, for instance, has risen by as much as 40 to 50 per cent. The same thing might easily occur in this country if controls were removed and what would be true of machinery would also be true of many other manufactured and processed articles that the producers have to buy in order to carry on their operations.

Viewed from this angle, price control would appear to be a policy which calls for support rather than condemnation and the greater the support it receives, the better will it work in the interests of the people of Canada and the greater war undertakings in which they are engaged.

CONSULT YOUR CONSCIENCE

So . . . You're not going to buy a Victory Bond.

Well perhaps you can't.

Perhaps, you've gone over every item of expense, cut down where you could, and then after an honest-to-goodness consideration of your budget found that you absolutely couldn't make the grade.

If so, you're O.K., brother.

But—if, for any other reason, you're not buying a bond, brother consult your conscience.

Ask yourself this question: Am I willing to sacrifice lives for dollars?

Lives for dollars.

Those are tough, hard words,—sure—but they're true. (Why hide from reality? Our boys aren't hiding from machine guns or dive bombers when the order is flashed to "Advance.")

Those words are true because when you refuse to invest in this Victory Loan, you're saying in effect: "I don't care a hoot how long the war lasts — or how many of our men are killed — it's no concern of mine."

Consult your conscience.

Do you know that if the last war had ended one day sooner — One day — three thousand lives would have been saved.

Three thousand.

Instead of dying on the battlefield, three thousand men would have gone home to their wives, sons, daughters, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, sweethearts.

Think of all the heartache and tragedy that could have been averted if the murdering guns had been silenced one day sooner.

How many lives might be saved if this present titanic struggle could be stopped just one day sooner?

One day.

Or one minute?

Yes — a "Cease Fire" signal given just one minute sooner might hold the last flight of bombers from taking off for Germany or Japan.

How many lives might be saved by that one minute? How many hearts kept from breaking? How many children saved from going through life "without daddy?"

One minute.

Consult your conscience, brother—then run to the nearest Victory Loan salesman or Bank and pour out your soul in dollar bills.

Hallowe'en passed off quietly in town with the usual number of witches and goblins about the streets. Unfortunately in one or two cases there was wanton and wilful destruction of property. No one objects to the younger folk having plenty of fun but the destruction of property is not to be countenanced.

Don't forget and buy a Poppy on Saturday next, Nov. 6th, and lend a hand to the good work being carried on by the Canadian Legion among the war Veterans and their families. They fought and bled on the battlefields of Europe to save us — let us reciprocate by helping them now.

The open season for deer hunting starts on Monday next, November 8th, and lasts until November 20th. There are no reported changes in the deer hunting regulations for this year, and given fine cool weather the local hunters are looking forward to a good hunt.

— V —

The Dominion Government regulation compelling farmers who have been sending their milk to their local cheese factory during the summer months to procure a permit to separate the milk and sell their cream to the creamery is causing a lot of dissatisfaction among milk producers. Ditto, the regulation making it illegal for a factory to make colored cheese for its patrons. While a certain amount of regulation and regimentation is expected in these times, it does seem that there are a number of regulations for which there is no legitimate excuse.

What Others Say

Any schoolboy patriotic enough to pick milkweed leaves at the price of three cents per pound dry weight certainly merits a place in the ranks of those noted "dollar a year" men, says the Prescott Journal.

An old colored woman explained how she kept content with her hard lot by saying: "When I works, I work hard; when I sits, I sit soft; when I starts to worry, I goes to sleep."—Ottawa Citizen.

THREE OPINION AGES

Opinions change. When you are young you are sure you are right. When you are middle-aged you begin to wonder whether you were ever right. When you are old you know you were wrong—but there isn't much you can do about it.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

REGULATIONS AGAIN

A story comes from Regina to the effect that a cattle dealer had 50 steers on hand which he felt he could handle most economically by killing them all at one time. So he wrote to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at Ottawa, asking that the restrictions be lifted. Back came the answer that there could be no loosening of the regulations, and that a number of the steers should be saved "for breeding purposes."—Midland Free Press Herald.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM

This country is facing a crisis as a result of the number of farm boys who have enlisted or have been called to industrial jobs in connection with the war effort. Not in a great many years have there been so many auction sales of farm stocks. The older men who are left to carry on are finding the job too heavy and are disposing of their farm stock. Scarcity of farm labor is one of this country's most serious problems.—Carleton Place Canadian.

Changes Were Requested

When the Federal Government brought about an amendment to this nation's Criminal Code to put more teeth into the law against betting or gambling especially book makers or bookies, behind this action by the Government in Ottawa there was an effort to comply with the requests of the attorneys of three provinces to tighten up this law in such matters.

WAR "TOO CRITICAL"

FOR NOV. 11 HOLIDAY

Hon. Norman McLarty secretary of state, announced the passage of an order-in-council leaving it to the discretion of Canadian municipalities to determine the "most appropriate" form of observance for Remembrance day, November 11. This is subject to no declaration of any general holiday.

Mr. McLarty said the government received representation from the Can-

Borrow, If Necessary, To Raise More Food

Farmers raising war foods, supplying all kinds of products for export to the fighting fronts, may find it necessary to borrow at the Bank to cover their extra requirements.

It is the policy of the Bank of Montreal, at all of its branches, to co-operate at all times with farmers, and especially at the present time when their work is so essential to the war effort.

Canadian Pacific Women Fill Enlisted Men's Places

Invading such predominantly masculine strongholds as locomotive shops and maintenance of way gangs, women have been helping to take up part of the slack caused by the enlistment of 16,285 men in the active armed forces from the Canadian Pacific Railway. At the first of September this year there were 675 women employed by the Canadian Pacific in positions normally filled by men.

This layout shows some of the women at work. Giving the final touches to the top of a loco-tive in the roundhouse at Sudbury, Ont., are Olive Kennedy clearing up the number plate and Jennie Neil doing some other cleaning.

Smiling Vivian Constant, at the phone and silhouetted against the engine crew call board, is call "boy" for 77 crews in the locomotive shops at North Bay, Ont., while Mary Lemieux, pictured checking up directions as a car where her father, Joe Lemieux, is a Canadian Pacific trainman.

Father-daughter combinations are not unusual now as demonstrated by the railroading Sauves of Sudbury in the picture where Fred Sauve, company boilermaker, sees how close he can come to his daughter, Lucille Sauve, an engine wiper, with a bit of grease. The list of women doing men's jobs shows there are 294 on eastern lines and 171 in the West in the mechanical and operating departments while the communications department is using 210 girls as telegraph messengers.

NEWS FOR THE BUSY FARMER

WINTER GOOD TIME TO REPAIR MACHINERY

Repair delays particularly during seeding and harvest time often result in great loss of yield and quality. It is a wise policy immediately after the fall work has been completed to make a list of the known parts to be replaced and reaped. Under the conditions that exist and are likely to exist for the war's duration it is wise to order parts well in advance of their actual need, otherwise long delays are likely to occur.

As far as possible, repairing should be done during fall and winter when there is not so much work to be done outdoors as during the growing season. Repairs that cannot be done on the farm should be taken to the blacksmith or other repairman in the fall and winter so that his work may be more evenly disturbed throughout the year.

In overhauling machinery, all bearings, axles, and similar parts subject to wear should be taken apart and examined carefully. Any that are not likely to work well for another full season should be replaced. Other parts should be thoroughly cleaned and examined, taking particular care to see that the lubricating parts are working well. Parts that work in the ground, such as cultivator shovels and discs should also be checked and those that are cracked or badly worn should be replaced. Others may require sharpening to insure best results for the following season.

A reasonable number of well chosen implements all kept in first class working condition will do better work than many machines in indifferent working order.

REPELLENT PROTECTS TREES FROM RABBITS

For the protection of trees against the depredations of rabbits in winter time, the Dominion Experimental station, Scott, Saskatchewan, has tested many repellents, the best of which is a mixture of resin and alcohol, states G. D. Matthews, the superintendent. This repellent is easy to prepare; the rabbits do not eat the bark of trees where the repellent is applied, and it does not injure the trees. Like most things around the farm, the making of the repellent calls for attention to a few details which must be followed to obtain the desired results. The alcohol used must be denatured ethyl (Grade 2D under wartime regulations) available through hardware or paint stores. Lump resin is used but it must be finely powdered before dissolving. The lumps can be crushed by placing them in a sack and using a wooden mallet. The resin can then be sifted through a piece of fly screen. The proportions are eight pounds of powdered resin to a gallon of denatured ethyl alcohol. It is preferable to mix two pounds to a quart and use it right away as it must be kept in an airtight container after mixing. The resin and alcohol are stirred until dissolved. Under no circumstances must the solution be heated. It is well to keep in mind size of container when mixing, as the addition of the resin in these proportions practically doubles the volume of alcohol.

A small paint brush is used to apply this repellent to the trees. If it becomes gummy while using, a small amount of alcohol can be added to restore the original condition. When applying the repellent, the bark must be absolutely dry, without mist or falling snow being present at the time. All parts of the trees which can or may be reached by the rabbits during the winter are treated. It is advisable to treat the trees as early as possible in the fall for protection during the winter.

In the winter feeding of dairy cows, good hay, roots or silage or both, a suitable meal mixture, a mineral supplement, salt, and water are the materials required for successful milk production.

BATAVA OVER TOP IN VICTORY LOAN DRIVE

With an objective of $75,000.00, the Bata Shoe Company employees crashed well over the top with a quick response, for a total subscription up to Friday last of $108,800.00, 55.07 per cent above their set objective.

In previous drives their subscription have always been well above their objective for the following sums: $20,600.00; $42,000.00; $57,750.00; $91,050.00.

The successful drive was set in motion with the presentation of a big Victory Loan rally and show featuring the R.C.A.F. Band, Frank Oldfield, brilliant Canadian Baritone, and addresses by Capt. Allen Piper and the President of the Company, Thos. Bata.

Capable and well organized committees carried out the task of soliciting the support of the employees who responded readily with the above mentioned results.

Pat was engaged putting a water main into the poorhouse. Saturday came and the boss saw Pat dolefully examining his pay cheque. "Mistake in your wages, Pat?" he asked.

"Oh no," said Pat, "but I was just wondering whether me or the water would be in the poorhouse first."

THIS IS A CHALLENGE TO YOU AS A CIVILIAN

Along with this present Victory Loan Drive, Canada's Fifth, came the usual crop of "heaps" from a few disgruntled airmen who could not see "why they should be asked to finance the war as well as fight it." Such shop-worn excuses and selfish thoughts reflect nothing but stupidity on the authors of them for it is sheer absurdity to try to draw the line as to how far an individual's war effort should go. How can there be a 100 percent all-out effort when such individuals call themselves Canadians and are a part of our national defense.

Nobody is asked to GIVE their money in this Fifth Victory Loan, but are merely given the opportunity to lend it at a very good profit to themselves. Materials must be provided to "Speed the Victory", the "tools to finish the job" must be paid for. Isn't it better to lend money at a fair interest than to have it ruthlessly taken from you as is done by the enemy in Axis occupied countries?

Apart from the necessity of those individual's support in protecting Canada and "Speeding the Victory", cannot they see the actual opportunity offered of doing themselves some good. Let them ask their fellow airmen and all the other Canadians who have bought Bonds whether they regret doing so. The answer will surely be "No."

Lack of sufficient funds to make an outright purchase of Bonds is no excuse for sitting back and "Letting Geo. Do It", for as in previous loans, the problem of payment can be solved through the Instalment Savings Plan. Airmen in whose pockets money burns large brown holes have found this system of saving right down their alley.

No, this duty of supporting Canada's Fifth Victory Loan cannot be tossed off lightly just because we are already in the Armed Services. Everybody, besides performing efficiently the tasks they are appointed to do, must shoulder a little more responsibility, for only in this way will we "Speed the Victory". Can you, as a Civilian, now feel at ease if you have not purchased a Victory Bond?

COLUMN OF THREE'S

This is the twenty-sixth in the series of bi-monthly news letters prepared by the Public Relations Division of Military District No. 3.

Canada's men in khaki are being called upon to give full backing to the 5th Victory Loan campaign which got under way on October 18.

Brigadier F. Logie Armstrong, O.B.E., officer commanding Military District No. 3, in a letter to all officers commanding units and establishments in the district urging support of the loan, points out that the loan's minimum objective of $1,200,000.00 is the greatest single financial drive in the history of the nation.

"So huge is the sum of money which must be raised, and so vital is it to the general conduct of the war, that all Canadians, civilians and service personnel alike, must back it up to the utmost of their purchasing capacity to achieve the goal. Success of this present campaign, indeed, will play a tremendous part in speeding the victory, which we all so fervently anticipate may become an accomplished fact in the not too distant future," wrote the District Officer Commanding.

Brigadier Armstrong stated that "Victory bonds are the best possible investment against post-war years when all ranks will be faced with the stark and very real question of rehabilitation into civilian life. Aside from all personal reasons, of course, purchase of victory bonds is a simple patriotic duty that belong to us all."

Address Mail Correctly

All readers of this column who write to members of the Canadian Army, whether stationed within the Dominion or overseas, should remember that mail must be neatly and clearly written and should bear the return address of the sender.

It is recommended that, wherever possible, ink should be used to address mail. In no case should indelible pencil be used.

Non-compliance with instructions laid down by military authorities for the proper addressing of mail to the troops results in confusion and delay in delivery.

As the number of days to Christmas decrease mail to men in uniform increases. This is the time when both the staffs of the civil Postal Service and Military Post Offices are taxed to capacity. The correct addressing of mail helps them sort and clear the many letters and parcels without hindrance.

A word to the wise:—Mail early and make sure letters and parcels are properly addressed.

Canadian Signals Training Centre at Vimy on the outskirts of Kingston, Ont., is an example of a typical Canadian Army Camp which provides and organizes sports and entertainment for the men in the confines.

1830 hrs.—Boxing, Drill Hall.

1900 hrs.—Camera Club, Barrack Block 2.

Following these activities the men spent an evening with Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard, who were screened in the Drill Hall in the movie "Hold Back the Dawn."

This really happened: An officer commanding addressing a new recruit said:—"We want you to look upon all your comrades in the regiment as your brothers and to regard me as your father . . . father of the regiment. Do you understand?"

"Yes, Dad," replied the recruit.

Questions and Answers Concerning The War Time Prices and Trade Board Rulings

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other War-time Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario:—

Q.—I do such work as repairing, remodelling, and pressing clothes in my home. Do I need a permit from the Board to do this work?

A.—You do need a permit.

Q.—I have asked my dressmaker to make me a cape for fall wear. She tells me this is against regulations. Is this correct?

A.—Yes. Manufacturers are not allowed to make capes any more. These can be considered as luxury garments and the regulation is designed to conserve material for more essential garments.

Q.—I have some unused coupons in my book. Has my grocer the right to tear them out and keep them?

A.—Definitely not. Unused coupons should be destroyed by the owner of the ration book.

Q.—I am a housewife and would like to help the war effort. I haven't much time to spare since we have two small children. Have you any suggestions?

A.—Yes. Although you are busy with your children and your house, you can still find time to help the fight against inflation by joining the Consumer Branch of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. If you get in touch with a liaison officer in your community, she will tell you how to keep track of prices when you do your shopping.

Q.—How many coupons do I need to surrender for a 3½ lb. bottle of corn syrup?

A.—If the bottle contains less than 42 fluid ounces, three coupons only need be collected. Each coupon is worth 14 fluid ounces.

Q.—Are chocolate bars rationed?

A.—No, they are not rationed. There are fewer chocolate bars on the merchants' shelves these days because of the increased demands of the armed forces. The fact that much precious sugar is needed in the manufacture of chocolate bars also has a great deal to do with the short supply.

Q.—I wanted to buy some cups and saucers but my storekeeper told me I would have to take some additional china in order to get the cups and saucers. Do I have to do that?

A.—It is contrary to Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations for a storekeeper to make "conditional sales." That is to say, if you want to buy a certain article, the merchant cannot insist that you buy certain additional articles. In this case, however, if the cups and saucers are part of a set, the storekeeper has the right to insist that they be sold with the complete set.

Q.—I like to buy meat in small quantities. I asked my butcher to give me a portion of a whole steak but he refused. Do I have to take the whole cut or surrender coupons for it, or can I insist on a smaller cut and give fewer coupons?

A.—If your butcher prefers not to cut a steak in two, then there is nothing you can do about it except buy some other kind of meat or buy enough steak to do for two or more meals. There is no Price Board regulation compelling you to buy more than you want of any commodity, nor is there any regulation compelling a storekeeper to sell merchandise in his store to anyone who wants to buy it.

Q.—Will you tell me exactly what products come under "preserved fruit" on the ration list?

A.—Preserved fruit means fruit in cans, jars, bottles or any other sealed air-tight containers. The rationing order also covers fruit pie fillings. Canned fruit containing quantities of other ingredients such as peaches and rice, pears and rice, and other fruits mixed with farina are on the ration list as well. Also included as rationed products are strained, crushed or pureed fruits used in infant feeding.

Q.—It seems to me that the prices being asked for women's winter coats are quite exorbitant and they have increased beyond all reason since the ceiling on prices went into effect. Is there anything that can be done about it?

A.—If you have reason to believe that such prices have risen and that there has been, consequently, a violation of the prices regulations, please report the circumstances to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

CRASH IS FATAL TO CAMPBELLFORD COUNCILLOR

When a car in which he was a passenger crashed into another automobile parked on No. 30 Highway about two miles south of Campbellford, John O'Sullivan, 75, Campbellford town councillor, was killed.

George O'Sullivan, driver of the moving vehicle, received face and chest injuries, Miss May Callaghan leg injuries and Mrs. George O'Sullivan suffered from shock. Sgt. Pilot Stewart Hoard, 21, of the R. C. A. F., Hagersville, said he had stopped the first car to change a tire. Although injured in the accident, he halted a passing truck and summoned aid from a near-by farm-house.

It was a very dissatisfied tenant who approached the landlord of the new house.

"Look here," he said, "that house I've just taken from you is horribly draughty. I've spent pounds on heating arrangements, but wherever I sit my hair is blown all over my head. Can't you do something about it?"

"I'm afraid not," he replied. "I think it would be easier and cheaper for you to get your hair cut."

FARMERS AND FARM WORKERS

If Your Farm Work has Slackened for the Winter, You Are Needed Elsewhere in Essential Employment

Highly essential work—very important in Canada's war effort and for the welfare of the Nation—is threatened with shortages of workers. One of the few sources of men available for other high priority jobs is those men on the farm who will not be needed at home during the Fall and Winter. Heavy needs must be met in many lines—producing fuel wood and other necessary forest products; in base metal mines, in food processing, in railway track maintenance. If you live on a farm and are not needed at home during the Fall and Winter, you are urged to answer this national appeal.

Farmers engaged in essential work during the off season will be allowed to return home when needed. Also, those on postponement under Mobilization Regulations will continue on postponement while in approved essential work during the slack on the farm.

Please answer this vital call NOW.

Letter To The Citizens of Stirling and Community

Dear Citizens,—

This year, as in other years, the Canadian Legion, through its 1694 Branches and Auxiliaries in Canada, is calling to the people of the Dominion that they should observe more than ever in solemn remembrance the symbolism which has become an integral part of Remembrance Day observance, and asks that every man, woman and child wear a Poppy from Saturday, November 6th, to Thursday, November 11th, in memory of those who laid down their lives in the Great War and of those men and women who have made the supreme sacrifice in the present conflict.

This appeal is not made on behalf of the Legion or of its members, but on behalf of all ex-service men who are in need. The collection and administration of the Poppy Fund has been entrusted to the Canadian Legion. This, however, does not mean that the Poppy Fund is part of the funds of the Legion. It is kept entirely separate and is not even treated as a part of the relief fund. It is rather considered as a Trust Fund, which the Legion administers for the benefit of all ex-service men. In granting relief, members of the Legion receive no preference but all ex-service men stand on an equal footing. Any man who has served and who is in need, has a claim on this fund. The Poppies and Wreaths which you will be asked to buy are made by an Organization of Disabled ex-Service men. These men are absolutely incapable of earning a living in any other way, and but for this industry, would be a charge on the public funds. If Poppy Day did nothing but keep these men self-supporting and self-respecting citizens, it would still be worth-while.

The organization of Poppy Day, the sales of wreaths and poppies, the handling of monies collected, the investigation and relief of all applicants, are done by monies collected, the investigation and relief of all applicants are done by voluntary workers. No man or woman connected in any way with this receives one cent as wages, salary, bonus, commission or allowance for expenses. All monies collected are placed in a special account which is controlled by a Board of Trustees of this Branch. Every expenditure made is approved and every account checked by the Board. Every applicant for relief is investigated carefully but sympathetically. Relief may take the form of food, clothing, fuel, rent or medical assistance. It is practically never issued in cash.

Over a million citizens of Ontario wore a Poppy in remembrance last November. 5,000 Wreaths were placed in Churches and at Memorials, in honour of the dead.

Should any of our friends desire further information on any point in connection with Poppy Fund activities our Branch Secretary will be glad to supply it. The Canadian Legion is grateful for the hearty support they have always received from the general public to make the lot of the distressed ex-Service man easier, and it is our hope that there will be no partial or permanent black-out for them. Give and give freely!

WEST HUNTINGDON

Hallowe'en Party Held

The West Huntingdon School house rang with rollicking laughter, on Friday evening, when the pupils paraded their masquerade costumes before a large and appreciative audience. The school room presented a gay appearance with Hallowe'en decorations including many weird displays of school art. Prizes were awarded by the teacher for the best representation of Hallowe'en spooks in various classes and were ably judged by Mrs.
Geo. Cooke, Mrs. J. C. Sills and Miss
L. Haight. Mr. Kenneth Stewart as chairman conducted the program in his usual jovial manner. The pupils displayed much talent in songs, dialogues and recitations of both Hallowe'en and patriotic character. The patriotic portion for the purpose of boosting the Victory Loan, consisted of a play entitled, "War Effort," and a chorus, "Dear Canada, Dear Land O' Mine; song, "Coming in on a wing and a prayer", with impersonations and a British Empire drill. Other items were performed by the aid of Goblins, who demanded blackouts and ghostly parades at intervals. To conclude hilarious stunts were conducted by the teacher in which the audience joined whole heartedly.

Lunch of cakes, apples, and candies tapered off the evening's enjoyment.
Much credit is due Mr. Chard, who is principal of the school, for this fine
Hallowe'en Party.

Navy Marine Engines Made and Carried by C.P.R.

Helping to meet the urgent need of the Royal Canadian Navy for main marine engines and condensers to be used in escort vessels the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus Shops in Montreal now has a steadily increasing flow of these "tools of war" coming from that section of the big shops which earlier completed the manufacture on schedule of more than 1,400 Valentine tanks, mainly for service in Russia.

centre flat car, prior to being prepared for shipment, weighs 89 tons, with condensers and bed-plates included. Its size is demonstrated in the picture on the right by one of the huge connecting rods. Handling of the engines to their destination comes under the head of "high and wide" transportation, with special advice from the Canadian Pacific's engineering department being followed to squeeze the loads past bridges and other permanent installations.

As was the case with the Valentine tanks the marine engines are being made at the same time as Angus Shops handles the greatly increased repairs on locomotives and cars necessitated by wartime's heavier transportation load. All the jobs are being done without new buildings or extensive additions to the existing plant, a further demonstration of the versatility of the department headed by H. B. Bowen, chief of motive power and rolling stock.

To reach marine engine production as early as possible machining of parts and fabrication of sub-assemblies was started while the tank work still was proceeding at the big Canadian Pacific shops.
As machine capacity and floor area were released from the tank contract they were utilized for the marine engine work. The first 10-ton engine bedplate was laid down a little over two weeks after completion of the last tank hull on the Valentine contract to earn the compliment in an official report that "the very best efforts were put forth by all persons responsible for this work".

Hallowe'en Party

On Friday evening a Hallowe'en Party was held in Mt. Pleasant Hall, sponsored by Miss Muriel Welbourn and the pupils of the Williams school, the proceeds to be used to purchase a piano for the school. School section No. 4 was well represented and about thirty people were present from the Allan School section. A few adults and most of the children were in costume. The judges were Messrs. Irwin Reid, Percy Hubble and Merle Spencer.

Rev. T. F. Townsend was Master of ceremonies and Mrs. Percy Hubble presided at the piano.

The hall was tastefully decorated with witches, black cats, pumpkins and candles. The programme opened with a grand parade and the prizes were as follows—best couple, Roy Thrasher and Robert Hoard; best adult—Miss Gladys Summers. Best junior child—Gail Murray. Best small girl—Miriam Seene. Best small boy—Billie Bailey. Miss Doris Sine didn't win a prize but the crowd did a lot of guessing before they found out who the "old lady" was.

The offering amounted to almost fifteen dollars and Mr. Hector Whitton sponsored a motion which carried unanimously that the section pay the balance and purchase the piano at an early date.

The programme was presented by the eighteen school pupils and they sang six choruses which were mostly of a patriotic nature.

Seven Junior pupils contributed a "Welcome" exercise and the Juniors sang, "Little Star" and "Pollywag." The pupils presented five dialogues,— "Hetties Happy Hallowe'en", "Painting a Chair," Uncle Hiram's Cold," "The Train to Mauro", and "The Ring of Fate."

Teddy Simpson recited "Better Watch Out," and Wes Johnson gave, "A Wise Boy." Eleanor Johnson gave "An Unfavourable Test", and Mabel Seene "Something to Remember." Neil Hubble sang, "The Burglar Boy", and Gerald Melville gave a monologue "The Soliloquy of a Ghost."

Six seniors presented a good-bye exercise. The teachers and pupils were tendered a hearty applause for their splendid presentation of the Hallowe'en programme.

Apples, cookies and doughnuts were served and all enjoyed a social time together.

Charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, the wretched old man smoothed his grey hairs and said: "Your worship, man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn. I am not as debased as

Swift, as profligate as Byron, as dissipated as Poe, as debauched as—"That will do," snapped the magistrate. "Seven days! And, officer, take a note of those names, and warn them. They're as bad as he is."

WE ARE NOW IN THE FINAL WEEK OF THE FIFTH VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN

During this final week your Canvassing District will have to raise

IF YOU WISH TO REACH YOUR OBJECTIVE.

This is a lot of money, but YOU, the residents of Stirling and Rawdon are responsible that this amount is so large because you have failed to do your share during the first two weeks of the Campaign.

You have bought a Bond, that's fine, but if you have not bought, remember this, IF Hastings County fails to reach it's objective, you are one of those who helped chalk up this black mark against us.

Employees of Industry and all urban centres are doing more than is asked of them. It is up to you now, yes, you of the RURAL DISTRICTS.

If you get any pride out of being one of those to help prolong the war, or to take another life, then do just what you have done—"NOTHING".

But we are sure you are not one of these people, and that it has just been neglect. You still have time to do your part.

Significant Disclosure

It has been significant in view of the Fifth Victory Loan campaign that the latest information released in Ottawa about savings deposits in the chartered banks of Canada has indicated that these have reached the huge total of $1,915,732,000 at the date of compilation, August 31, 1943, with this total on the same date of 1952 having been $1,699,553,000. In other words, there has been a sharp increase of savings deposits in Canadian banks to the extent of the huge amount of $216,199,000 and this has been regarded as suggestive of the degree of capacity or ability of the people of Canada to support the Fifth Victory Loan.

General Agreement with Terms

Since the Badoglio Government in Italy had declared war against Germany and had become a co-belligerent, it is most important that the man-in-the-street in this nation should know that Prime Minister Mackenzie King has stated clearly and definitely that the Government of Canada had been informed right along of the activities or proceedings and that it had been in general agreement with which culminated in the official statement about the present position of the Badoglio Government in Italy as it had been arranged by the Governments of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Plethora of Aspirants
If any of the gossip which is heard now along Parliament Hill is well-founded, there is a rapidly increasing pace of activity behind the scenes in political circles in this nation's capital and all signs indicate that there will be an exceptionally large number of political parties or groups playing their roles in the next general election drama in Canada. Moreover, these signs reveal that a surprisingly large number of candidates may contend the seats in many parts of this country, though much of the discussions about possible drastic changes in the electoral machinery of the present federal voting system have no specific or authoritative backing, being nothing more or less than mere speculations.

Developments Are Expected

There will be given more and more attention in this country to the social fitness of the ordinary people of the nation and developments in this respect are expected in due course along Parliament Hill where for some time there has been a grant of no less than $225,000 for a national council on physical fitness.

Extra Work

The Federal Government's tax collection officials and offices are carrying a far greater load of responsibilities and work than the people of Canada seem to realize that this is no secret now in well-informed quarters in this nation's capital where it is known that the tasks and problems of these officials are both complicated and difficult. Indeed, the extra work of these tax collection officials and their staffs was hinted in this year's additional vote of $601,055 for administration of the head and district offices near the end of the last session of Parliament. Incidentally, the Minister of National Revenue, Hon. Colin Gibson, and the Deputy Minister, Fraser Elliott, K.C., had found it necessary to go overseas in the course of their work since the last session of Parliament.

Marked Decline in Claims

Ever since the month of March of this year there has been a steady decrease each month in the requests or claims by Canadians for benefit payments under the Unemployment Insurance Commission, with the number of requests in that particular month being 5,046. Moreover, it should be interesting for the man-in-the-street in Canada to learn that it has been disclosed that the most frequent reason for rejection of claims has been that of leaving employment voluntarily without proper cause.

No Political Significance

There have been various reports or stories circulated along Parliament Hill about alleged or so-called indications that certain actions or decisions of the King Government seemed to be in preparation for the next general election, such as the announcement of the Federal Government to increase the subsidies on dairy products. However, this increase in the subsidies had no political significance whatsoever since it was known in Ottawa that this was entirely necessary due to the rise in costs on account of feed grain failures in milk and cheese areas of Canada.

THE QUESTION

Mrs. J. Mc. asks: Recipe for Quick Drop Doughnuts.

QUICK DROP DOUGHNUTS

1-3-4 cups once-sifted pastry flour or 1-2 cups once-sifted bread flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, 1-2 tsp. salt, 1-5 tsp. grated nutmeg, 1 egg, 1-5 cup corn syrup or liquid honey, 1-4 cup (lightly packed) brown sugar, 1-3 cup milk, fat for deep frying.
Measure the flour and add baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Using a rotary beater, beat the egg until very thick and light; gradually beat in the syrup or honey, then the brown sugar. Sift in the dry ingredients a third at a time, alternating additions of the flour with the milk, and combining after each addition. The mixture should be of drop consistency — if the batter seems thin, sift in a little additional flour with an extra 1-3 teaspoon baking powder. Heat shortening to 365 degrees (hot enough to brown a cube of white bread delicately in 55 to 60 seconds). Dip a spoon in the hot shortening and use to drop small spoonfuls of the batter into the frying kettle. Brown on one side, turn and brown second side; lift from the fat and drain—serve them hot or cold. If desired, a thin sugary coating may be given to the doughnuts by sifting a little icing sugar or fruit sugar, and some ground cinnamon over the top. Yield 18 small doughnuts.

BRACKEN OUTLINES POST-WAR CREED

John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative leader, outlined a 10-point post-war creed for Canada, which he said "is simple, understandable and accomplishable." The creed called for post-war jobs for every returned soldier, sailor and airman. Mr. Bracken said the post-war creed called for:

1. A job for every soldier, sailor and airman.
2. Work for every man.
3. Responsibility for every citizen.
4. Fair play for all.
5. Equity for agriculture.
6. Stability for enterprise.
7. Opportunity for youth.
8. Equal pay for women for equal work and just recognition of the "whole" character of their higher calling as mothers of the race.
9. Security for the aged, the sick, the injured and the unemployed.
10. An expanding economy for all.

Mr. Bracken explained that "responsibility for every citizen" means that all persons in every community should take a greater interest in both community and national affairs so that they will better appreciate the problems of Canada and be more entitled to expect a greater share of contentment and prosperity.

AIR FORCE GIRL

By Renée Shann

Jane, a fashion artist, shares an apartment in London with Stella, a free lance journalist. Jane joins the WAAF. The night before entering service she walks through dim streets and collides with a flight lieutenant of the RAF. Stopping to break her engagement with Stella she discovers that the lieutenant, Timothy Poel-Sanders — nicknamed "Tips" — is Stella's divorced husband. Jane hears that Tip's squadron flies at 10 o'clock and that they are searching for him. She pedals to the home of Mrs. Stanton, where she finds the flier. He leaves at once. Mrs. Stanton accuses Jane of sending Tips to his death. Tips misses the flight from which Flight Lieutenant Stanton and Jimmie Stafford fail to return. Later, Stanton returns, as from the dead, and sees Tips kissing his wife at the gate. He threatens to divorce her. Jane meets Stella again and finds her in desperate circumstances. She asks Stella to join the WAAF.

Stella glanced at herself in the glass and shook her head. "Not today, my pet."

Jane laughed. "Well, most days anyway. I say, what's the time? How about coming out and having some lunch with me?" She had plenty of money. She'd hardly spent a penny for weeks. Although she didn't earn much, if she saved it up she felt she was entitled to have a little burst in London. "And after lunch," she said, "I must get my hair washed."

"I thought of washing my own," said Stella. "I always do these days. I'm supposed to be going out this evening. I'm not sure now that I won't put it off. I'm only meeting Rupert and I know he won't mind."

"Oh, no, you won't! because I'm going out too."

Stella looked at her swiftly, inquiry in her eyes. Her lips formed a name. Jane shook her head. "No, not Tips. He and I are not on dining terms any longer. No, I'm meeting Clive Forbes. By the way, I take it my dresses are still here?"

That evening, as both girls were dressing to go out, Stella brought the conversation around to Tips again. "What's he like, Jane? Is he still devastating?"

Jane began to smear cold cream over her face, preparatory to removing her daytime make-up.

"Well, of course I'm prejudicial against him so perhaps I'm not the right person to judge. The girls all say though that he's the most attractive man on the station."

Stella leaned forward toward the mirror. She said, not looking at Jane as she spoke, "Rupert asked me to marry him last night. I've seen a lot of him recently. Practically every day."

Jane said warmly, "Darling, that's grand news. At least it will be if you're going to say yes to him."

Stella began to brush her hair with firm, vigorous strokes. She said, her brows drawn together in a worried little frown, indecision in her voice. "That's the trouble, Jane. I don't think I am. I'm terribly fond of him. I always have been. But . . . oh, I don't know—somehow I don't think I'll ever be able to bring myself to marry anybody. There was Tips, you see."

Jane said almost angrily, "Darling, I think you're wrong not to marry Rupert. He's worth a hundred Tipses."

Stella swung around on the stool at her dressing table. "Does that make any difference? One doesn't love a man for what he's worth."

Jane knew this, but she said sagely that one should, and asked, over her shoulder, "Why won't you, Stella?"

"Because," Stella said slowly, "I think it would be so unkind to Rupert. I'd only agree to marry him if I were in love with him. And so long as I feel as I do about Tips . . ."

her voice trailed away. Her eyes, could see in the mirror. She thought. It was odd that they should both be in love with Tips, they, being such close friends, and respond with the same intensity to the attractions of the same man. But it was something that would get neither of them anywhere. The sooner she made Stella appreciate this the better.

Jane slid into her slip and reached for the filmy, gay chiffon dress that was still on hanger. She said, her voice coming to the other girl from the masses of shimmering material, "What do you want from marriage, Stella? Must it be the same as you hoped for the last time?"

Stella plucked a stray eyebrow before replying, "I don't think I know."

I don't suppose I really want the same. I could never get it. Tips had all my first fine careless rapture." She laughed as she went on, a trace of cynicism in her voice. "Actually if I were sensible, I'd of course say yes to Rupert. He should be an answer to any girl's prayer. He has plenty of money. He'll take care of me, give me a good roof over my head and three meals a day. What more should one want, Jane? At least when one's reached my age?"

"Or mine either for that matter," remarked Jane. "You know, our trouble is we're both incurably romantic."

"God knows I shouldn't be. I was disillusioned about romance and love and marriage long ago. It's odd how ideas persist, how that ridiculous niggling feeling still remains that perhaps one day Tips and I . . ." she broke off. "Oh, Jane, what are you doing to me! I don't want to talk about him."

Jane said gently, "Isn't it better sometimes to bring things into the open? You've kept this hope of yours hidden too deep in your heart." In a little rush she continued, "You wouldn't do something, I suppose? Something that I think is an extremely good idea?"

Stella looked at her warily, "Such as?"

Jane drew a little quick breath. "See Tips again," she said.

Stella's eyes flashed. She said tensely, "Considering you've just given me the glad tidings that he's about to figure in another divorce case, I hardly ly imagine there's much chance of our 'coming together', if that is the little romantic idea you have in mind."

Stella said bitterly that Jane was a fool to imagine she and Tips could ever be reconciled. Their break had been absolutely final. Too many things had been said on both sides that neither could forgive. Jane glanced at the time. It was getting on. She would have to hurry or she would be late for Clive. She gave herself one final inspection in the long mirror. She thought, if Tips were to see me now the chances are he wouldn't recognize me. She wished momentarily that he could.

Jane found Clive waiting for her when she reached the Savoy. He came forward eagerly to greet her. In his uniform she had to admit that he looked strikingly handsome.

He stood smiling down at her. "I thought you were lovely when I saw you this morning. But tonight—"

Jane met his eyes. "I admit this setup is a little more feminine."

"You'd always be feminine. That's your charm. I like my women to be essentially feminine."

She wrinkled up her nose at him. "I wasn't aware that I was one of your women."

"Weren't you?" He laughed softly. "You could be the only one if you choose."

She laughed this aside. She said it was far too early in the evening.

She said, as they came away from the show some few hours later, "Isn't this where I say goodnight and go home?"

"Indeed it isn't! I've booked a table at the Cafe de Paris, Darling. We decided in the train, don't you remember, that we'd make a night of it?"

A shadow crossed her eyes. Tips had wanted her to go to the Cafe de Paris the first night they'd met, but she'd run away from him, leaving him to find her gone. But tonight—tonight she wasn't with Tips. She could dine and dance with Clive, every night and never want to run away from him for fear that by seeing too much of him he might have the power to hurt her. To heck with Tips Poel-Sanders. She didn't care about him and she wouldn't even think of him. Then she glanced up suddenly, turning her head over her shoulder, knowing instinctively that he was somewhere near, and saw him coming across the floor toward their table. He paused beside her. "So it is Jane! Just at first I wasn't certain!"

Clive rose to his feet. Jane introduced them. After the usual conventional greetings, Tips said apologetically that he hoped Clive didn't mind his butting in on them. He was with a party of brother officers sitting up in the balcony and when he saw Jane he thought he must have a word with her.

Since he seemed determined to make it several words Clive was forced to suggest he have a drink. The waiter set another chair at their table. Jane smiled from one to the other. This was really extremely satisfactory.

A waiter brought a glass and poured champagne for Tips. "Here's luck," he said to the other two.

"Happy landing," said Jane. "How have you been getting on, Tips? It seems quite an age since I last saw you." She smiled across at Clive. "Squadron Leader Poel-Sanders is at the same airdrome as I am. He's one of our ace pilots."

Clive didn't seem particularly interested.

"He's also one of our ace home-wreckers," went on Jane, tempering this remark with a brilliant little smile. "I was most diverted to hear of your latest exploit, Tips. How soon is the case coming on?"

Tips tried to make a joke of it. "I think that's going just a little too far."

Clive changed the subject, whether tactfully or from boredom, Jane wasn't sure. They kept the ball of light reminiscences tossing back and forth so deftly that at last Tips murmured that he supposed he'd better go.

Jane looked at him as if suddenly remembering he was there. "Are you returning to the airdrome tonight?"

"Not unless I'm sent for. They know where I am. After that other time, you remember the one I mean, I always leave word where I can be found."

"It seems a wise precaution." She waved a little hand airily in his direction. "Well, good-bye, Tips. It's been fun running into you."

Tips said a curt good-bye to Jane and an even curter one to Clive. Jane watched him walk away, a wistful look in her eyes.

"Jane, my sweet," said Clive gently, "I think you overdid it. You're in love with him, aren't you?"

"No," said Jane fiercely and told herself she meant it.

He shook his head. "You can't deceive me, my child. Still, it's nice to hear you deny it."

Jane felt sudden tears prick her eyes. She said softly, "I'm sorry, Clive. Did I make an exhibition of myself?"

"No, darling. You were merely a little young."

"I don't feel very young. I feel old and disillusioned."

The band was playing a dreamy waltz. Clive rose to his feet and held out his hand. "Come on. Let's dance. You're neither old nor disillusioned and you've got a lot of fun in store for you."

Dancing, she could see Tips up in the balcony. As she and Clive moved round the floor, she caught sight every now and again of the table where he was sitting. She was looking in his direction as a page approached him, obviously with a message. She saw him rise to his feet, say a word to his companions and move away.

The music stopped and she gave Clive's hand a quick little squeeze.

When two o'clock came, and the band packed up Clive said: "How about coming back to my place for a quick one and then I'll take you home?"

Normally she would have refused. But this evening she wasn't feeling normal and she wasn't in a hurry to go back to the apartment and slip quietly into bed. "It will have to be a quick one."

"It will be, my sweet."

When they arrived, he showed her into his comfortably furnished sitting room, found drinks for them both, and sat her down in a chair opposite him. He said, "If we keep this respectful distance, you won't feel any qualms about paying me this nocturnal visit."

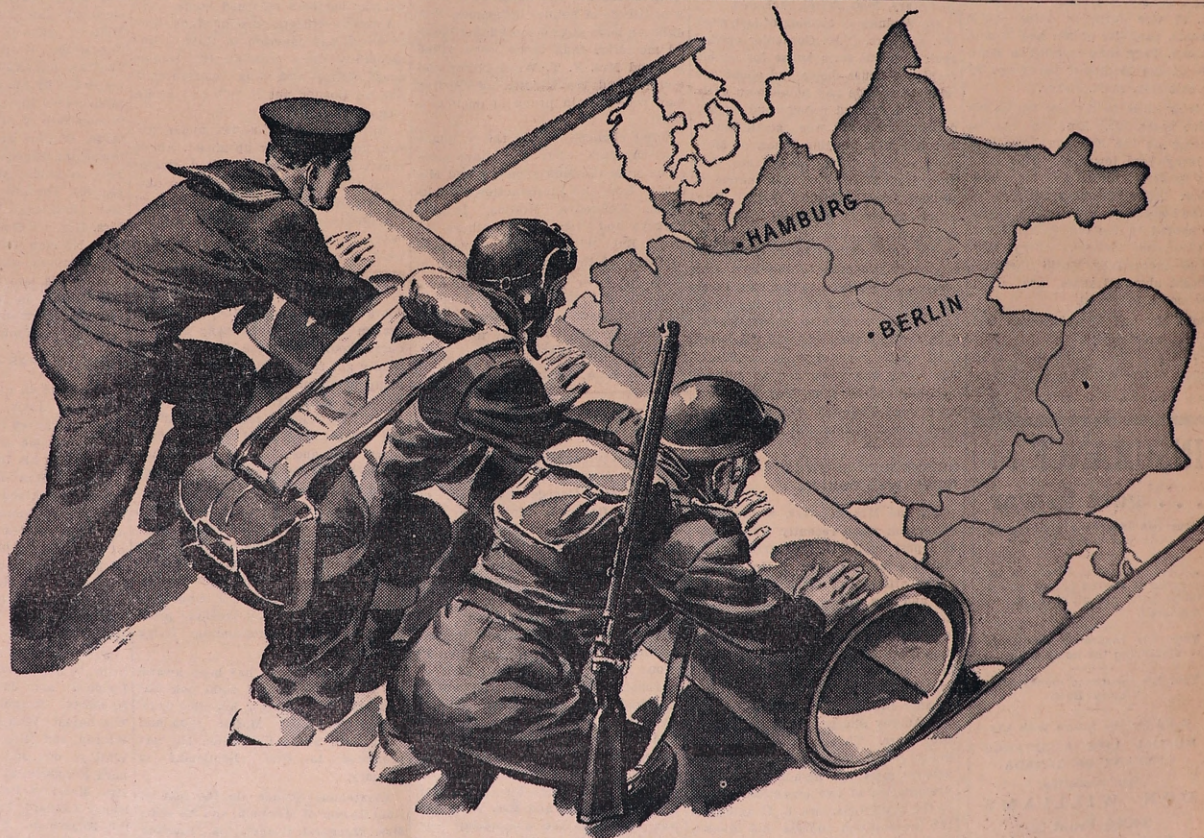

She gave a little laugh. "I haven't any. Why can't a girl be alone in an apartment with a man at two in the morning without evil-minded people imagining there's something in it?"

(To Be Continued)

A woman was asked by the Customs official at the landing post, "Anything to declare, madam?"

"No," she replied sweetly, "nothing."

"Then, madam," said the official, "am I to take it that the fur tail I see hanging down under your coat at the back is really your own?"

NEWS-ARGUS ADS. PAY

Tribute To Fred T. Ward

Enroute—Chilliwack, B.C.
 October 25th, 1943

The News-Argus,
 Stirling, Ontario.

Dear Sir:—

May I, as a former pastor of St. Andrew's Church, be permitted to pay my tribute to one of the worthiest citizens that the Village of Stirling ever knew. This letter is necessarily delayed as the word of the passing of Mr. F. T. Ward reached me here on the Pacific coast only yesterday. It is rather a long backward look to the day in September 1906 when I arrived in Stirling to commence my first pastorate. Yet I still recall the quiet kindly welcome our now departed friend then gave me.

No minister ever had a more loyal and appreciative comrade than had I in Fred T. Ward. He did not parade his religion but he worked it out. In the language of some of my Western mining friends, he was "white clear through." No man ever received a raw deal from Fred Ward, nor did he ever resort to anything underhand to promote his business. Perhaps in some respects he was too trustful of other people and sometimes suffered thereby, but he could hold up his head and with a moral consciousness could have "looked the whole world in the face, for he owed not any man."

He had his sorrows and struggles as his friends well know, but he faced even the most crushing ones in the knowledge that he had tried to do right and that if these burdens were a part of his share of life's hardships, he would carry them bravely and even cheerfully to the end.

My memory of the faithful wife whom he so greatly appreciated and whom he so sorely missed is that of an unceasingly industrious housekeeper—ever cheery and kindly, and from whose life and home went forth a multitude of helpful influences. Few children have more honored and blessed memories than those who called Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Ward father and mother, and the Village of Stirling may well remain proud of such citizens.

What changes have taken place since my days! How many have passed on from the Montgomery's and McGee's: from the Bissonnettes, Melkies, Kennedys, Rollins, Drury's, Farkeys and too many others to name. But with that innumerable company of those who have gone ahead, we shall one day be reunited and among those whom some of us will most gladly meet and greet will be our recently departed and loyal friend Fred T. Ward.

F. A. Robinson.

St. Paul's W.A.

The November meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. George Rosebush, on Tuesday afternoon, November 2nd, with forty-five ladies present. The devotional period and business portion was directed by the president, Mrs. J. L. Good. The meeting opened with the singing of the Theme Song, and prayer by the president. The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting, along with other communications received during the month, also reported eleven cards and two letters had been sent during October. Forty-five visiting calls was reported made by different ladies of the W.A. during the month. Mrs. J. L. Good and Mrs. Nora Westcott will act as the visiting committee for November.

Mrs. R. B. Duffin and Mrs. W. L. Fox was appointed the nominating committee, to bring in the new slate of officers for 1944, at the December meeting. A splendid financial report, prepared by the Treasurer, Mrs. M. Hick, was given by the Secretary. The program of the afternoon was directed by the convener of the committee, Mrs. Carleton Wright, and was based on the Themes, "Peace" and "Healing." After the singing of hymn 523 Mrs. Will West read the Scripture Lesson taken from the First Epistle of Peter, verses thirteen to nineteen—followed with "Lesson Thoughts" on the Scripture Lesson read, and prayers by Mrs. Wright and Mrs. J. J. Wilson. A group of very interesting readings were presented, bearing on the Theme, "Peace" in the following order:—"Education for Peace Essential," and "When Peace Shall Come," by Mrs. D. Gray; "The Touch of the Master's Hand," by Mrs. Ashley Brooks, and "Peace," by Mrs. George Megginson. Mrs. P. V. Helliwell delivered an outstanding address, giving a very graphic description of Dr. Victor Heiser's work as Field officer for the "Rockefeller Foundations" fight against Oriental plagues. A fine solo given by the pianist, Mrs. Harold West. The meeting closed with the singing of hymn 541, Mizpah Benediction, and the National Anthem. Mrs. Arthur Gordonier staged an interesting group contest. A very

Exploits of Missoula Pilot Told

The following is an account of the experiences in North Africa, of First Lieut Oliver J. Cosner, of the American Air Force, whose wife is the former Margaret Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Anderson, of Stirling.

At an advanced North African air base First Lieutenant Oliver J. Cosner, of 438 East Broadway, Missoula, Mont., recently completed his fiftieth combat mission in the North African theater of operations. As pilot of a B-25 bomber in General Doolittle's strategic air force, Lieutenant Cosner had helped drive the Axis from Tunisia and Sicily into Italy.

During the early days of the Tunisian campaign he assisted in the severing of General's Rommel's supply lines with daring sea sweeps and later saw much action when the enemy airdromes became the object of attack.

Cosner's first encounter with enemy fighters was on May 28 while on a mission to Bo Rizzo airdrome in Sicily. The formation he was in encountered much flak just prior to reaching the Sicilian coast and after finding their target with great difficulty, they were attacked by approximately 50 enemy fighters just as they started the bomb run.

Some of the FW190's stayed above the formation dropping bombs and others came in singly on the tail of the element in which Cosner was flying.

Staff Sergeant John Misik, 423 East Sixth street, Erie, Pa., tail gunner in Cosner's ship, shot down one fighter while others were damaged or destroyed by various bombers in the formation. In spite of the opposition the target was well covered and 16 aircraft were destroyed on the ground. All our bombers returned home.

Cosner's fiftieth mission took him to a railroad junction in Italy. Immediately upon crossing the Italian coast, heavy flak was encountered and as Cosner put it "all hell broke loose."

"I felt several bursts under my ship and saw plenty up ahead. About that time my ship was hit, smoke filled the cockpit, and I became dazed. I saw my co-pilot had been hit so I stayed at the controls. We had already slipped out of formation but went ahead and dropped our bombs anyway."

"Upon trying to close our bomb bay doors we discovered the hydraulic system had been shot away and the doors would not close. The engineer finally got them closed with the hand pump emergency system and by this time we were far behind the formation. We then dived down and as the coast was crossed we were only a few feet above the water. I then climbed to 4,000 feet and highlighted it for home."

Without a hydraulic system to lower the wheels Cosner had to crash land on his home field which he very successfully did. No one was injured in the landing and the plane was so slightly damaged it was a simple job to repair it. This was excellent proof of the pilot's outstanding flying ability.

Lieutenant Cosner has been awarded the Air medal and eight oak leaf clusters. He received his pilot training at King City, Moffett field and Victorville, all in California. He was promoted to first lieutenant in January.

Lieutenant Cosner is the son of Ruel Cosner of Missoula, and his wife, Mrs. Margaret Cosner, is residing here also. She returned to Missoula from Florida when her husband was sent to overseas duty.

Mrs. Cosner recently had letters from the wife of an officer in her husband's squadron in which she told of having been informed by her husband that he owed his life to Lieutenant Cosner. At the risk of his own life, he said, the officer had remained near him, fighting off enemy planes in order to give him a chance to make their base in his disabled ship. Had Lieutenant Cosner flown on, there was no question but that he and his crew would have been lost, he wrote his wife, who passed the news on to Mrs. Cosner.

Another letter of Lieutenant Cosner's was a vivid description of the dainty luncheon was served during the social hour. The sincere thanks of the W. The following ladies were responsible for the excellent program and lunch, Mrs. Carleton Wright, Mrs. Wm. West, Mrs. D. Gray, Mrs. R. P. Coulter, Mrs. J. J. Wilson, Mrs. Geo. Megginson, Mrs. Ashley Brooks, Mrs. George Rosebush, Mrs. Robert Rodgers.

Citizens Gathered At Cenotaph For Observance of Remembrance Day

Rev. C. C. Brazill, L.Th., of St. John's Church, Delivers Address—Students Present

With an impressive Remembrance Day Service, Stirling today paid tribute to those men who sacrificed their lives in the first great war, and in the present conflict, also to their families who stood resolutely behind them during the long years of the war.

Veterans of the Great War of 1914-18, and students of the Stirling High and Public Schools, paraded from the school grounds to the cenotaph. Mr. C. I. Hutton, president of the Stirling Business Men's Association, acted as chairman in the absence of Reeve W. C. West.

The impressive service opened with the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past," followed by Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. David Gray, of St. Paul's United Church.

The address for the occasion was given by Rev. C. C. Brazill, L. Th., of St. John's Anglican Church.

Following the address, comrade Dr. C. F. Walt, read the names of those honoured and wreaths were deposited in their memory by Mrs. J. McConnell, for the Province of Ontario, and comrade Dr. Walt, for the Legion. Two minutes' silence was observed, after which the Last Post was sounded by Jack Hermiston. The National Anthem, followed by hymns, and the benediction by Rev. C. C. Brazill, brought the impressive service to a close.

Flying Officer Jackman Bails Out of Plane

Flying Officer Desmond Jackman, son of Mrs. F. Jackman, of this village, was forced to bail out of a Canadian bomber over England, following a raid over enemy territory recently. The following clipped from the Toronto Telegram gives the complete story:

"The nicest crash-landing I've ever seen," commented Flying Officer D. Jackman, of Stirling, Ont., navigator of the crew of a four-engine bomber which came home on two of its four motors from a raid over enemy territory.

The pilot was a Toronto boy, Pilot Officer Max Kogon, of 141 Delaware Ave.

Not only did two of the motors quit, but ice was forming on the propellers and wings. The crew was on its first operational trip with a Canadian bomber squadron.

When the aircraft got into difficulties, P.O. Kogon ordered the crew to jump. He brought the big plane down with himself as its only occupant. The others in the crew earned their "Caterpillar Club" badges by jumping.

Jackman was the first to jump, from 3,500 feet. On the way down he lost his flying boots and after landing he walked for about 45 minutes in his stocking feet.

Local Soldier Mentioned In Story From Battlefield In Italy

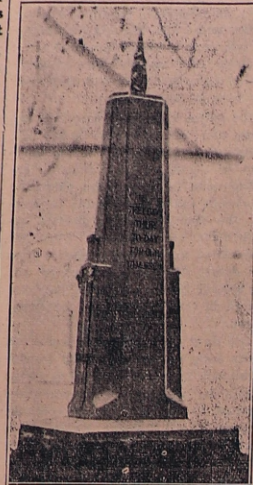

The name of Pte. Bill Reynolds, of Stirling appears in a story by Louis V. Hunter to the Toronto Star, telling of conditions in an Italian Mountain city.

The story in part is as follows:

Canada City—You won't find this town under that name in any gazetteer. It is a mountain city and the Canadians who captured it have named the streets after familiar thoroughfares back home, have opened theatres and converted it into a rest centre. Occasional shells are a reminder that the Germans are not far away.

Auxiliary services have opened an "Aldershot Officers' Club" and a "Beaver club" for other ranks. Two movie houses, the Savoy and Capital are doing a thriving business.

Life revolves around a big square which has "Piccadilly Circus" painted in bold black letters at each corner. Portage Ave., Queen St., Main St., St. James' St., Barrington St., Hast-Harold Reddick of Toronto, and Clinton Heath, of Stirling, are grandsons of Mrs. Reddick.

Mr. McConnell is a well-known composer of piano and orchestral music and has composed for Hart House string quartet, of Toronto. These compositions will be played as an offertory number at the morning service in the Presbyterian Church, Sunday morning, by the organist, Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.L.

Local Medico's Office Robbed

During his absence at the noon hour, on Saturday last, the office of Dr. P. V. Helliwell, local practitioner, was entered and a quantity of morphine tablets stolen from his medical kit. Discovery of the theft was made by Dr. Helliwell shortly after returning to the office, but it was not until a hypodermic needle was found missing some time later that the police were called. A lady, who was seated in the waiting room on his arrival, and who gave what afterwards proved a fictitious name, along with a male companion, are thought to have been the guilty parties. According to Dr. Helliwell the door between the waiting room and his consultation room was locked and it is thought the thieves gained entrance by use of a skeleton key. On Sunday the hypodermic needle was discovered secreted among some books and papers on a shelf in the office. Provincial police are investigating.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Stapley, Cherry Valley, were Sunday guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stapley.

Mount Pleasant Anniversary

Rev. J. A. Dilts, Holloway St. Church, Belleville, Was Guest Speaker For Occasion

Sunday, November 7th, marked another anniversary for Mt. Pleasant United Church, on the Rawdon Circuit.

The two services were well attended with guests present from Carmel, Stirling, Zion, Hoards, Sidney, Salem, Campbellford, Belleville, Springbrook, Burnbrae, Wellmans, Bethel, Port Perry, Camp Borden, Moira, West Huntingdon, Madoc Junction and other points.

Potted plants, white cysanthemums and the two silver trophies won in 1942, by the Y.P.U., graced the edifice and added their bit to the service.

The guest minister was Rev. J. A. Dilts, of Holloway Street, Belleville. In the morning he spoke on "The Church", giving numerous reasons why he himself supported and attended that institution, the main one "That the Church was the only institution that Christ founded." He aptly illustrated the indifference of a great many people to the church and used that favourite hymn, "I love Thy Church, O Lord, The House of Thine Abode."

In the evening he based his theme on "Whither Bound" using the Bible Story of Abram and Lot. Many people never intend when they make their first mis-step, to end up in Sodoma but like "Lot" of old they keep on drifting and finally they lose out in the battle of life.

Rev. T. F. Townsend, the pastor was present for the anniversary and he presided at both services and also assisted the choir.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver (pianist) was in charge of the music and the choir of twenty voices assisted by Mr. John Coggins, of Burnbrae, contributed a splendid musical repertoire.

At the morning service the choir sang two anthems "Gospel Bells" and "What a friend we have in Jesus." In this the tenor solo was taken by Mr. Coggins, the obligato by Mrs. Townsend and the duet by Mrs. Marguerite McMullen and Mrs. Percy Hubble. A quartette, "I need His Care", was rendered by Misses Lois Weaver, Ruth Rose, Lois McAdam and Gladys Summers.

At the evening service the pastor's wife, gave a vocal number, "River of Grace". The choir rendered, "I need Thee Every Hour", and a quartette, "Lead Kindly Light", was contributed by Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Townsend, Mrs. Carleton Potts, and Mr. John Coggins.

Almost two-hundred and fifty dollars, was placed on the plates and the anniversary closed with the keynote, "The Church's" One Foundation is Jesus Christ, the Lord."

Practically every home entertained dinner guests on Sunday and several guests spent the day at Mt. Pleasant, and attended both services.

SWEET PEAS IN BLOOM

Although winter is just "around the corner", flowers are still in bloom in this district. This (Thursday) morning, Mrs. A. Gordanier, Mill Street, presented this office with a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas which she picked from her garden.

ASSURES SUPPLY

● Tweed Council has taken precautions to lead off a wood famine by arranging for the purchase of one hundred and fifty cords of wood, which will be sold at ten dollars per cord plus transportation costs.

With the delivery of coal so indefinite, it would seem that the council's move to prevent a fuel shortage during the winter months is a wise one, and one that might well be copied by other municipalities.

EDUCATION WEEK

● This is Education Week, which was organized in Canada some nine years ago for the purpose of directing the attention of the public to the schools for at least one week of the year, with the hope that over the years, parents and taxpayers alike may become better acquainted with the work of the school.

It was never intended, of course, that public interest should stop at wider acquaintance; for it is not sufficient that public opinion must participate in supporting the school. In a self-governing society it is the responsibility of the electorate to determine the type of school it shall maintain in the best interests of that society. It is the responsibility of the electorate to determine the place of the school in the life of the community. Any occasion, such as Education Week, which serves to call the attention of the public to the school is one to be welcomed by all socially conscious citizens.

Canada's schools are big business. No other business, except the war, affects so many of our population; for education to-day becomes the direct responsibility of every parent and every taxpayer. In a country engaged in a life and death struggle to maintain the right of the people to govern themselves, the school becomes an institution of very vital importance.

The church of the country is becoming more and more aware of the close bond that should exist between the home, the church, and the school, particularly in the building of character, and more churches than ever this year will take advantage of Education Sunday as a day on which to recognize and emphasize this bond of unity. To-day more than ever before large sections of the community are wondering whether we have not in the past neglected the moral and spiritual basis of our whole social structure. In times such as these, where tens of thousands of our best are called upon to risk life itself in defence of our civilization, it becomes very necessary to appraise our civilization, to know very definitely why it merits defence at such a cost. Such an appraisal cannot fail to emphasize the fact that the very fundamentals of all our democratic way of life are the very fundamentals of all our religious faiths. A well rounded educational programme, designed to build citizenship for a self-governing community, cannot afford to be concerned only with the intellectual needs of those citizens, but must concern itself also with their moral and spiritual development.

IF OUR ENEMIES CAN BEAT INFLATION, SO CAN WE

● Despite our best efforts, the cost-of-living index continues to rise slowly but all too steadily with the result that another increase in the cost-of-living bonus has been authorized.

This has caused the Minister of Finance to assert that the "most critical" stage of the battle against inflation is "just getting under way" and to demand that in the national interest the price ceiling "must be held."

Canada, he adds with truth, has been more successful than most countries in holding prices in check, but these successes can be swept away in the space of a few short months if controls are now relaxed.

It is worth remarking in this connection that, whatever their failures in other respects, our principal enemies, Germany and Japan, have not been unsuccessful in combatting inflation. The German cost-of-living index, which is considered by experts to be fairly reliable, records a rise of less than 10 per cent. from the beginning of the war to the present year. Similarly, there is evidence that the Japanese index, which rose rapidly from 1937 to 1940, has since been reduced and held relatively stable.

Hitler and Tojo know all about the baneful and chaotic effects of inflation upon a war economy and are doing their utmost to keep prices under control. As long ago as the time he produced "Mein Kampf", indeed, Hitler had very definite ideas about what would happen if inflation ran riot and he is determined to prevent it if at all possible. In this it must be admitted that he is gaining a fair measure of success even if he is compelled to adopt methods which would be repugnant to most Canadians.

If the Germans and the Japanese, beset as they are with so many and divers troubles and having their price structures subjected to such severe pressures, can manage to keep their cost-of-living indices under strict control, there is no reason why we, who pride ourselves upon our democratic efficiency and powers of organization, cannot also do so and by the most determined and co-operative effort make certain that in this vital sector of the fighting front there shall be no weakening in the face of the enemy.

The success which the Germans and the Japanese have achieved in checking inflation may well serve as a challenge to Canadians to do likewise, to gird their loins for an all-out battle against this insidious yet formidable foe and to assent to nothing which will help to bring the catastrophe of inflation upon them.

ON BEING KEPT TRACK OF

● Not long ago, a Canadian immigration officer was heard to remark, as regards travel across the boundary, that he hoped that the regulation requiring passports would continue. He said it helped to keep track of people.

And now comes a Canadian Press dispatch from Ottawa suggesting that some Ottawa people think it might be a good thing to continue national registration in time of peace. Provincial authorities, it is argued, find the registration cards useful in various ways, including the sale of liquor. And they also help in cashing a cheque.

Being skeptical of "think" stories that come out of bureaucratic centres, we suggest mildly that the Ottawa report is the product of some civil service brains which have been realizing that it would be a shame if all that neat filing system established in 1940 to learn which of us can milk a cow were discarded after the war. It's a filing system that must make a lot of jobs. It would be a pity, from the bureaucratic point of view, if the filers were sent into a cruel, hard world to do something useful.

As for keeping track of people, there may be a few people so strangely unorthodox, in these times, as to think that free people who are law-abiding should not be kept track of. Parents and wives and sons and daughters and other relatives, not to mention neighbors, do a fair job without the assistance of a perpetual national registration. And if a citizen who is not wanted by the police doesn't want to be kept track of officially he should have that privilege.

It used to be his privilege. Why not again? —The Printed Word.

● There will be little maple syrup offered for sale in this district next spring, unless there is some modification in the regulations covering its sale. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has issued an order that maple syrup must be sold only in 12-ounce containers, and we venture the opinion that not one in ten farmers will be bothered.

● Juvenile delinquency is increasing at an alarming rate. This can be charged to a large degree to the indifference of parents to the home training of their children. The practice of allowing young boys and girls to loaf about the streets until a late hour is fraught with danger and if little John or Mary gets into trouble no one can be blamed but the parents.

● Hastings County has again done her share in contributing to Canada's war effort by exceeding a quota of $3,525,000 in the recent Victory Loan Campaign. While several of the smaller communities fell below their objective the larger areas more than made up the deficit. The response given the various canvassers was gratifying to all concerned, and the results obtained show county residents behind Canada's war effort.

● Good news for old age pensioners is contained in the recent announcement by Dr. R. P. Vivian, Public Welfare Minister of Ontario, that the maximum monthly pension has been increased from $23 to $28. An increase in the mothers' Allowance payments was also announced. Increased cost of living has had its effect on many aged people with no means of sustenance other than their pension and the Drew Government's action will place them in a more favourable financial position. The same applies to Mothers' Allowances and there is no doubt but that the Government's action will meet with general approval.

What Others Say

YOU SAID IT!

Pity those poor city dwellers whose lives are made up of milking-stool restaurants, gas-fume laden air and street cars with flat tires. We believe there is more enjoyment in one week in the small town or in the country, than in a whole month in the city with its rattle and bang, and people going no place in a hurry.—Durham (Ont.) Chronicle

NOTHING FAIR ABOUT IT

A printer takes some type and some ink and some paper and a press which is his own and turns out for himself five hundred letterheads which ordinarily sells for three dollars and fifty cents. As his ability to do this does not count, as his time and labour does not mean a thing, he must pay the eight per cent. sales tax amounting to twenty-eight cents on that job for himself, to a government that spends thousands of dollars on carpets for its big shots. Is it any wonder that socialism is gradually creeping into the printing offices of the country?—Trenton Courier-Advocate.

C.C.F. AND THE CHURCHES

According to a contributed article last week, a C.C.F. speaker in Fergus said that "Last week, three of the largest church organizations in Canada acknowledged the C.C.F. principles of Socialism as the only salvation for the principles of the church." Congratulations to the CCF. No other political party in Canada ever got wholesale backing from the churches. We would even like to know which churches these were.

We presume one of the C.C.F. principles most heartily endorsed is the custom of holding political meetings on Sunday.

The church should also benefit in the long run from such an alliance. The C. C. F. leaders may even start attending church if this keeps up—Fergus News-Record.

Display Too Much Anxiety

(Almonte Gazette)

The Ontario leader of the CCF party is inordinately anxious for an election. So is the federal leader of the CCF. Maybe they will find before they are through that it isn't good policy when buying a horse to display too much anxiety about closing the deal. The more the CCF howls for an election, the more it looks as if it felt that the zenith of its fortunes had been reached; that now was the time to strike, and that from this time forward its chances would diminish.

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Major Edwin Watts, Deputy Assistant Provost Marshal of Military District No. 3, is the man who heads the Canadian Provost Corps in this District.

Former Chief Constable of Nanapanoe, Major Watts holds the "Iron hand in the Kid Glove", in keeping good order and military discipline with the men of the Canadian Army who are on leave or furlough in M.D., No. 3.

No. 33 Company, Canadian Provost Corps, under the command of Major P. Gray with headquarters in Ottawa, is under the supervision of Major Watts, as well as Military Detention Barracks at Barriefield.

The duties of Provost personnel are many and are a 24-hour a day job. Among the varied duties which members of No. 33, Coy., C. Pro. C., are called upon to do are the patrolling of streets and railway trains throughout the district; station patrols, apprehension of absentees. They are also called upon from time to time for escort duty of prisoners of war on arrival in Canada, until they are placed in the designated Internment Camp.

The duty of a Provost is not as many people believe, to stop service personnel from enjoying themselves, but to see that all service personnel conduct themselves in a soldierly manner at all times. Every assistance is afforded the service man in seeing that he gets full and accurate information with regard to tram times and where lodgings are to be found for those who are away from their stations.

Provost Personnel are required to take two months basic training before they are sent forward to the Canadian Provost Corps Training Centre for a three months' course in Provost training. Every phase of Military Training is taught at the Centre, which covers the use of rifle, revolver, Sten gun, Bren gun, Tommy gun, map reading, convoy duty, and the art of Judo. After the completion of this course they are ready to proceed as a reinforcement for overseas. Provosts must have a better than average education, due to the fact that they are called upon to make many investigations in all matters concerning military affairs.

Major Watts points out that in this District, the finest co-operation is given by the R.C.M.P., Ontario Provincial Police and Municipal authorities.

Use Worn Envelopes

Civilian organizations and individuals often receive official communications from army officials and departments enclosed in worn out envelopes that have been used two or three times over.

Likewise, the stationery used is sometimes unprinted, plain paper. The reason: conservation.

Several months ago an order went out to the Canadian army that every effort must be used to conserve paper and, in the main, this order has been scrupulously carried out.

Used envelopes have been consistently stripped of old stamps and labels and old addresses, either rubbed out or covered with a fresh label. The common army custom is to seal the back flap with an official label on which the address is typewritten. When the receiver removes the label the envelope is ready to be used again.

Within the army the standing order is that all inter-army correspondence must be on plain stationery. No printed stock is to be used. The official stationery is to be used only when corresponding with officials or organizations outside the army.

At C.A.A.S.

Three M.D. 3 officers are at present attending the Canadian School of Army Administration at Kemptonville. They are Major A. E. Thoms, of 724 John Street, Kingston; Lieut. Roald John Kihl, 625 Lyon street, Ottawa, and Lieut. Joan M. Farthing, of 362 Templeton street, Ottawa.

Major Edwards, who enlisted in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps in July 1940, is senior medical officer at the Kingston Army Reception Centre at Fort Frontenac. He is a graduate of Queen's University.

Lieut. Farthing of the C.W.A.C. is former recruiting officer of Military District No. 7. She was educated at Halifax Ladies College and Halifax Academy. Lieut. Kihl, a member of the Canadian Dental Corps, attended Glebe Collegiate Institute and the High School of Commerce in Ottawa.

At this unique event the members of the Collegiate Institute Board and the members of the Special Centennial Committee are desirous that there should be present as many as possible ex-pupils of Lisgar presently serving in the Armed Forces.

THE CHARTERED BANKS of Canada keep abreast of the Dominion's expanding needs.

Six times since 1870 the Bank Act under which the Chartered Banks operate has been revised by parliament—six times in that period the activities of the banks have been carefully scrutinized by the people's representatives.

Every ten years the Bank Act has been thus revised. Each one of the six decennial revisions has contributed much to the evolution of the banking system to meet the expanding needs of a developing Dominion.

In 1934 the sixth revision of the Bank Act was made. Fifty members of the House of Commons made up the committee, which examined witnesses—among them bank officers, government officials and reformers—and studied exhibits filed by various individuals and organizations. Findings were submitted to the House, and later that year the Bank Act was revised in many important particulars.

Through democratic enquiry and decision, the Canadian banking system has grown and been adjusted to meet the needs of the people, providing a depository for savings and a sound basis for Canada's free economic development.

NEWS FOR THE BUSY FARMER

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES UNDER PRICE CEILING

A big mistake many table potato growers make is to think that any potatoes of good appearance will make good seed potatoes. The fact is potatoes may carry virus diseases which cannot be recognized in the tuber but which seriously decrease the yield and quality of the crop.

The potato crop in Canada in 1943 averaged only 135 bushels an acre, which leaves a very small margin of profit for the producer. It is, moreover, not economical to plant poor seed, because of the increased acreage and labour required for the crops that are so urgently required in wartime. By means of seed potato inspection conducted by the Plant Protection Division, in all the provinces, experienced growers are assisted in the production of Certified Seed Potatoes sufficiently free from virus diseases to produce high and profitable yields of table potatoes, and also in the production of Foundation and Foundation A seed potatoes which are required for planting by seed potato growers.

In a recent order issued by the wartime Prices and Trade Board establishing ceiling prices for potatoes, recognition has been given to the value of potatoes certified by the Dominion Department of Agriculture as seed potatoes. "Certified" seed, which is suitable for table stock production, has a ceiling of one cent a pound over that for the table grade, Canada No. 1. The higher quality Foundation A and "Foundation" seed have ceilings over Canada No. 1 of one and one-half and two cents a pound, respectively.

Canadian Certified Seed Potatoes have established a high reputation in several countries for quality and productivity. An increase in the prevalence of disease-carrying insects in recent years has added to the difficulties and cost of producing crops eligible for certification, and that the higher ceiling allowed for seed potatoes is a proper acknowledgement of a special and more expensive product.

SOURCE OF IDEAS MANY FARM MACHINES

In the realm of agricultural engineering, the Dominion Experimental Farms have made many valuable contributions, notably through the Engineering Section of the Field Husbandry Division. Entirely new types of machines which have been developed partly by the Farms—and certainly tested and improved by them—include a wide range of machinery for use in cultivation without ploughing so that the trash coverage on summer fallow may be retained. Other contributions by the Farms are haying machinery to eliminate hand labour and the introduction of other labour-saving machinery; the origination of new machines for handling certain of the newer crops, such as a rubber the adaptation of standard combines bearing crops, and the discovery of in the handling of crops, such as Argentine rape and sunflowers, with a combine harvester.

IN SHEEP AND WOOL IMPROVED SITUATION

Due to war conditions and the emergency created through the uncertainty of North America's wool requirements from outside sources reaching the continent, a nation-wide campaign of sheep expansion was undertaken in 1942 by the Dominion in co-operation with all the Provincial Departments of Agriculture. As a result there has been a considerable increase in the production of sheep and wool, shared by all the provinces, and the assistance given under the program by the Dominion Department of Agriculture is continued.

The situation in regard to the safe transportation of wool from Australia, New Zealand, and South America has improved and the emergency has lessened appreciably. The meat situation, however, is such that an increase in the production of lamb and mutton in Canada is highly desirable in connection with Canada's present and potential obligations in relation to world food supply for the duration of the war and in post-war years.

EASTERN ONTARIO EXPORT FOOD SHOW

Bacon, cheese and eggs, according to the high standard of quality, these products are being exported to Britain, will be featured at the third Eastern Ontario Export Food Show to be held at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, November 23rd and 24th.

The exhibit of bacon will not be a competitive one this year, but will consist of 40 carcasses selected for the purpose of demonstrating grades and quality. It will also illustrate the special qualifications of Advanced Registry breeding stock for high quality bacon production and economy in feed consumption.

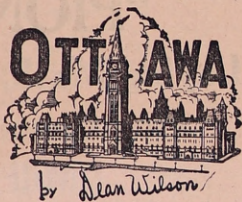

Farmers visiting the show are to be invited to take part in a carcass grading competition on Wednesday morning, November 24th. Prizes will be awarded to the winners. The competition is open without entry fee.

The cheese exhibit will be made up of entries from 10 countries in the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association area. There will be an open class for June cheese, another for July and August and one for September cheese. In addition there will be a County Class in which cheesemakers will compete against other cheesemakers in their own county. Entries in this class will be with October cheese.

The competition for eggs will be limited to two classes: a 30 dozen case of grade A large and a similar sized case of Grade A Medium. The competition will be open to the 84 licensed Egg Grading Stations in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec.

There are also to be several educational exhibits, special exhibits of dehydrated food products and a display of labor saving devices for the farm.

W. M. Croskery, Ottawa, Provincial Representative in Carleton County, is Manager of the Show.

Dramatic Suddenness

Ever since Prime Minister Mackenzie King had indicated what position or attitude his government would take in regard to holding of a general election in this country, this statement had only failed to clear the political air. Indeed, it had actually intensified the political atmosphere along Parliament Hill and the result had been that such political speculations or activities have increased in scope and intensity because there has been a strong feeling in opposing political camps that Premier King had revealed in reality that it was quite possible under certain circumstances that federal election could be called in Canada with dramatic suddenness, depending upon developments in the war, particularly in the event of a sudden end of the war or any other entirely unexpected immediate occurrence. Speculations on such occurrences are only speculations. However, speculations on the possibilities of a sudden general election have been relevant in political circles by the strong statement made at a gathering in Ottawa by E. B. Joffe, C.C.F. leader in Ontario, who warned amongst other things that a general election in Canada may be called at any time.

Lively Discussions

There has been lately considerable discussion behind the scenes along Parliament Hill about post-war plans or preparations on the part of the Federal Government with reports at home and abroad being suggestive of some of the activities in the next session of Canada's Parliament and being suggestive that the government of Canada may have to formulate sooner or later some specific policies on immigration as part of its plans and preparations for the post-war period, particularly since there had been much dissatisfaction for many years regarding this country's immigration policies. However, lately there have been reports outside Ottawa as well as talk behind the scenes in the nation's capital and immigration conditions will likely change after this war since there have been indications that large-scale immigration to Canada will be sought not only from the British Isles but from the European continent as well as other parts of the globe, though there has been no concrete evidence so far in Ottawa that there will be any radical changes of immigration policies immediately or that there will be any startling changes until the situation as a whole will be capable of the most careful examination in the light of the new international set-up after this war, with a hint of such possible changes of policies being contained, perhaps, in the development in the United States where a movement has been made to change the exclusion order against the Chinese.

War Plants and Lay-offs

In view of the complaints and allegations heard in labor circles on account of a number of lay-offs of workers in war plants in Canada including the occurrence in one war plant where between 400 and 500 workers were said to have been affected, it has been disclosed by usually well-informed sources in the nation's capital that order cancellations or temporary changes in war industries forced such inevitable effects with the point being stressed strongly that the labor situation as a whole has been only very slightly affected by these lay-offs, that workers have to be absorbed on other employment in the same industry, if possible, or in other essential war work, and that such continuous changes have to be expected in accordance with the requirements or developments in the war.

Two Extensions

Ever since Canada's Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in Ottawa, Sir Lyman Duff, had reached the usual age for withdrawal from active duties on the nation's highest Bench, that is seventy-five years of age, it has been deemed advisable in the best interests to continue his term on no less than two previous occasions, though numerous stories had been heard about likely successors to this top position on the Canadian Bench, with the second prolongation of his term supposed to end in January of 1944.

Remarkable Record

Attention has been drawn to the report that, though Canada has been paying about one-half of the war costs out of current tax collections as compared with only 30 per cent in the United States, yet when Canada's last victory loan was held in the spring about 40 per cent of the war loan had been purchased by individuals and this had shown that 2,660,000 subscriptions were obtained or one for each 4 1-2 persons in this country. This has made a very deep impression now in view of the October $1,200,000,000 objective in Canada's Fifth Victory Loan which has an equivalence to the $15,000,000,000 objective of the United States Third War Loan, though Canada's record of meeting its war costs out of current tax collections is much higher than the United States.

Insurance on Public Properties

When the Minister of Public Works Hon. Alphonse Fournier reported the amount of war risk insurance taken out by the Government in Ottawa, he revealed that amount to be then $1,160,470 on properties valued at

"SALADA" TEA

$199,067,189 or 90 per cent risk, with the premium being $270,000. The insured properties included harbours and river works public buildings in and out of Ottawa, expropriated properties in the capital, furniture and rented quarters in and outside Ottawa, National Art gallery's works of art, Canadian war memorial collections, and so forth.

Enactment Would Be Necessary
Though several provinces have had such a law within their own spheres, yet it has been pointed out in the nation's capital that in order that a national labor policy of collective bargaining for all Canada can be created it would have to be done by a Federal statute of the Parliament in Ottawa. In the past there has been no great enthusiasm in Ottawa to interfere in this provincial sphere.

Proper Action

It has been indicated for some time along Parliament Hill that, if the Government deemed it advisable to take proper action, it would do so to ensure that supplies of used trucks would be available to essential industries, such as farming, mining, lumbering, and general haulage, with careful consideration having been given to this problem of the transfer of used trucks and this being a problem which can present serious difficulties or which can become even more so during the harvesting of the western crops.

Can we beat the Germans in the Dodecanese? Peter Pester, the office punter, is sure of it. Says he: "Of course we can, Samos in Italy. We'll Scarpanto off'n Hitler. So Leros not be discouraged. The Rhodes open to victory."

The HEART of HYDRO

● Hydro is a living thing. It takes people . . . their hands and brains and hearts . . . to keep Ontario supplied with power in uninterrupted flow.

Producing power for Ontario's needs is Hydro's number one job. A veritable army of men is required to keep this power flowing at peak efficiency. For Hydro is much more than mighty power plants . . . much more than the transmission lines you see striding through the countryside.

Hydro is the employees who keep the power plants producing, who guide and co-ordinate the constant flow of energy through the transformer stations. It is the employees who patrol the lines that carry power to far-off mills and mines, to roaring industrial plants, busy stores and offices, comfortable homes, peaceful farms.

Hydro is the families of those employees who have set up their homes in city and town and country . . . and, perchance, deep in the isolation of wilderness and forest.

It is these . . . and all the other co-operative men and women employees . . . who have put life into Hydro, made it a living organization devoted to the benefit and service of Ontario.

Just now their efforts are directed mainly to producing power for victory and essential uses, but, after the war, they will be ready again to provide the full peace-time service so essential to the development and progress of this province.

Yes! The heart of Hydro is people . . . employees and consumers alike . . . both necessary . . . both partners in a great public enterprise. For today . . . as in the past, and in the future . . . the success of Hydro is dependent on both the faithful service of the employee and the wholehearted support of the consumer.

ing the address:
Dear Norma and Jack—
Seldom indeed have the members of Zion congregation had the privilege of gathering upon a more happy occasion. All too many of the marriages in our community take one of our young people away, but in this instance we can truthfully say that what is our gain, "and of course Jack's as well", is someone's loss.
You have come to our church group,
Norma, not as a complete stranger, for though many of us have met you only once before this evening, yet we all feel that you are already a real friend. Jack has always given himself unsparringly to all community and church activities.
As a congregation and a community group we are more than pleased that with so many good places to live in this country, you should choose to make your home in the good old Zion district, which we naturally believe is second to none.
As a very slight token of our regard and affection for you both, we would ask you to accept these gifts with the earnest prayer that God richly bless your home and grant you many joyous years of wedded life.
Signed on behalf of the members and adherents of Zion church.

Canada Has Done It

An extremely interesting and timely question has often been asked if Canada was able to compete with the United States in aircraft prices. According to the best possible source of information in the nation's capital, Canada has not only been able to compete with the United States in aircraft prices but she has done it.

STIRLING W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of Stirling W. I. was held on Thursday, November 4th, in the Community Hall.

The meeting opened in the usual way. The roll call was well answered for. The Correspondence was dealt with. A letter from the Dept. of Agriculture re our grant was discussed. Three letters of appreciation were received, from Mrs. O'Donnell, Mrs. N. Eggleton and Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ward, for the W.I. in remembering them in their hour of sorrow. The war convener reported ten ditty bags sent to the Salvation Army; seven boxes to members' boys and one box for an unknown soldier. This box was sent to Rev. A. S. McConnell, to be given to some soldier at Christmas time; also a pair of socks given to one of our navy boys of the village; eight quilts sent to the Salvation Army in Belleville. Don't forget Nov.

18th as it is our work day again.

The Roll Call for December meeting—an article made from a yard of cotton material. A prize will be given for the best article.

The members decided to each raise some money before the first of the year. Each one to raise her amount in what ever way she wishes too. Get behind this effort ladies and each one do your best. Mrs. F. Heasman, district president, of Pine Grove, was guest speaker. She gave us some very good suggestions. Her topic was based on our Institute, "Yours and Mine." In the absence of Mrs. Hammond, Mrs. J. J. Wilson kindly took her place as hostess and looked after the programme. Mrs. W. West gave a reading, "The Monkey's View Point." This was sent in by Mrs. Hammond. Mrs. L. Rodgers, a reading, "Youth and Success"; Mrs. H. Rodgers, "Kind Words"; solo by Mrs. Wilson, "I'll take you home again, Kathleen"; Mrs. Gordanier and Mrs. Heath gave two humorous numbers with Mrs. Harold West at the piano. Owing to the late hour the delegates report to the convention was held over for the December meeting. The More We Get Together" and the National Anthem closed the meeting.

CHANGING CBY CALL LETTERS TO CJBC

Effective with the station "sign-on" on Monday, November 15, 1943, at 7:45 a.m., EDT, Radio Station CBY will thereafter be known as Radio Station CJBC.

The new station will operate on the same power and frequency as the present CBY—i.e., 1,000 watts; 1010 kilocycles, and, as in the past, will be owned and operated by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Permission has been granted to increase CJBC's power to 5,000 watts, and this will be done as soon as technically possible.

The change is being made to avoid the present confusion between the two CBC-owned stations in Toronto (CBL CBY), and as the initial step in making CJBC the key station of CBC's new Dominion Network, which will be created on January 1, 1944.

Life In The C.W.A.C.

By Sgt. JOYCE McKEE

Dear Babs:

You can pack a lifetime into a ninety-six hour pass spent in New York. As perhaps you remember, my cousin, Kathy, married an American and has been living in New York for several years. She has been urging me for some time to pay her a visit and take a gander at little old New York. Naturally, I was not unwilling and when she sent me the money, I started making plans at once. First I tended to my knitting in Kingston and saved my forty-eight hour passes for two months which if your arithmetic is as good as mine, adds up to the above mentioned ninety-six hours. I obtained permission from the officer commanding to leave the country, convinced her that I would be spending money obtained from a source in the States, which as you probably know is one of the conditions, and last Thursday noon I left for Montreal. Waiting for connections I managed to sandwich in a couple of hours with the family before I took the night train to New York.

The train was crowded and I found myself sitting beside an American W.A.A.C. who was returning to the States after visiting relatives in Montreal. She was very friendly and helpful, tipping off about the places that are a "must" in New York. Through meeting her, I found myself talking to several American soldiers and I was impressed, as I have been before, with the amazing, easy friendliness of Americans. No formal introductions but with typical breeziness, they were calling me "Canada" and asking a thousand questions about the C.W.A.C.

Union Station! I felt like an atom in that enormous terminal and was thrilled to see Kathy on the platform. I had a feeling that I could be swallowed up and never heard of again! Then came the skyscrapers, and, of course I gawked like a north woods Canadian. Yes, I have spent most of my life in Montreal, but New York . . . I could not help it; the buildings are one of the most wonderful spectacles that I have ever seen.

We had breakfast and a chat at Child's where I distinguished myself, habit being strong, by trying to buy Canadian cigarettes. Needless to say I settled for an American brand. After freshening up at Kathy's apartment, we "did" the stores, and I had a few pangs over the fascinating clothes and accessories. The fact that I was in uniform did not keep me from trying on a few "wacky" hats. By the way, I picked up your purse in a little shop on 34th street. I remember you saying that you like any colour as long as it is green, so green it is.

It was an amazing day, strangers repeatedly stopped to shake hands and ask what part of Canada I was from. I could not sit down in a restaurant without some friendly stranger sending me over a package of cigarettes and once it was tickets to a musical. Then there was the old lady, who stopped me on Fifth Ave. to say that if I was sent to England I must be sure to look up her sister who lived in Sussex. Without a doubt, Americans treat personnel in the services royally.

I packed all the events possible into my schedule—saw the lucky Strike Radio Broadcast (tickets obtained from the Women's Service Club, Madison Avenue), the Rockettes at Radio City Music Hall and dropped in, of course, at the famous U.S.O. Club, where one of the hostesses took me in charge. One of the services provided by the club is dropping a card to any given relative, saying, so-and-so arrived and "is having a wonderful time", etc., so I asked to have one sent to my father as a souvenir. American soldiers from all parts of the States were amusing themselves in the recreation rooms. I danced with a tall stranger with a Texas drawl who actually hailed from Texas, and stopped to chat with several chaps from Hawaii who had never seen a C.W.A.C. before. Everywhere the "Canada" badges on my sleeves served as an introduction.

Of course, I was not going to spend a leave in New York without taking a whirl at the night life, so in a party arranged by my cousin and her husband, I toured the gay spots from Greenwich Village to the exclusive Hotel New Yorker, where Johnny Long's orchestra was playing. Then all of a sudden (it seemed) I was on a train again, headed north, tired, because I had been shortchanged on sleep, but feeling I would not have missed it for the world.

Sorry to hear that your days in a trailer are coming to an end but it is turning rather cold for trailer gypsies and from all you tell me it has been well worthwhile. What is next on your programme?

THE VALUE OF AN APPLE

Hello Homemakers! "An Apple a day keeps the doctor away" is an old adage. The apple cannot be measured in monetary value when you consider the satisfaction of munching a good Ontario eating apple, and as a fruit it rates high in nutritional value. Raw apples contain amounts of minerals needed for good bones and teeth and red blood. One apple doesn't provide the total amount that we need daily, but when cooked and combined with such foods as milk, meat dishes, cheese or eggs, we may be assured of eating health-providing dishes.

RECIPES

Rice with Apples

2 cups rice, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 cup milk, 3 eggs, 2 Canadian-grown apples (Steamed).
Pare and core the Canadian-grown apples; cut in eighths and cook until soft. Steam the rice; and the well-beaten yolks of eggs and sugar; mix well; add cooked apples; fold in the stiffly beaten whites and bake 30 minutes in electric oven at 350 deg. in a well buttered baking dish. Serve with cream.

Spiced Apple Pudding

3 cups bread crumbs, 1 cup sugar, 1-4 pound raisins, 2 table-spoons fruit juice, 1-2 teaspoon ground cloves, 3 cups chopped apples, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon mace, 3 eggs (beaten separately).
Scald the milk, stir in the crumbs and scald for 2 minutes. Remove from fire, mix together all the ingredients, adding lastly the whites of eggs beaten stiff. Butter pudding dish, fill with the batter and bake for about 40 minutes in a moderate electric oven. Serve with custard sauce.

Custard Sauce

3-4 cup milk, yolk of 1 egg, 1-2 tablespoons sugar, salt, few drops vanilla.

Beat yolk of egg slightly, add sugar salt; mix well; then gradually add hot milk. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until it thickens. Strain and, when cold, add flavouring.

Dried Apple Pie

Wash the dried apples thoroughly; soak over night in cold water; stew until tender. Rub through a sieve, add sugar, a little lemon rind and about 1 teaspoon butter. Fill and bake as any other pie. Serve warm with sweetened cream.

Apple and Cheese Salad

Mix browned soya beans with twice their bulk of cream cheese, adding a little cream to blend the mixture. Season with pepper and salt and make into tiny balls. Pare mellow tart apples, core and slice across the centre into rings about 1-2 inch thick. Arrange rings on lettuce leaves and place several cheese balls in the centre. Serve potato salad and dressing. TAKE A TIP: Apples and vegetables from the small gardens must be carefully stored this year, since imported vegetables are expensive and processed vegetables are not available at present.

1. The storage space is most important. A separate room in the basement of your home with a window in it is advisable.
2. Do not hang cabbages upside-down, unless the temperature is close to freezing, because moisture collects in the leaves causing growth.
3. Store pumpkin and squash by wrapping well in two folds of paper. Only dry and well matured ones will keep.

4. Dry onions should be stored in a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees just above freezing.

5. Carrots, beets and turnips should not be washed. Dry and pack in leaves or sand in a dark but ventilated room; keep at 39 degrees. Use a thermometer to check temperature of lower part of storage room.
6. Store apples and winter pears in slatted crates in a cool, dry place.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. S. W. asks: Would you recommend malaga grapes to substitute for expensive oranges?

Answer: No, oranges contain Vitamin C which the grapes do not. A better food to substitute is a glass of tomato juice or raw grated turnips.

Mrs. J.H. asks: How to cook liver without frying it.

Answer: Liver may be sauted (that is, cooked in a frying pan with a small amount of fat) or browned in a hot pan for only a minute, then place in covered pan and bake for 10-15 minutes. Liver may be minced and shaped into a loaf pan and baked.

Baked Liver

Put in bottom of dripping pan or baking dish slices of calf's liver, cover each slice with a strip of bacon. Put hot water about 1-4 inch deep in bottom of pan and bake in a moderate oven, 375 F. from 40 to 50 minutes.

AIR FORCE GIRL

By Ren'ee Shann

Jane, a fashion artist, shares an apartment in London with Stella, a free lance journalist. Jane joins the WAAF. The night before entering service she walks through dim streets and collides with a flight lieutenant of the RAF. Stopping to break her engagement with Stella she discovers that the lieutenant, Timothy Peel-Sanders — nicknamed "Tips" — is Stella's divorced husband. Jane hears that Tip's squadron flies at 10 o'clock and that they are searching for him. She pedals to the home of Mrs. Stanton, where she finds the flier. He leaves at once. Mrs. Stanton accuses Jane of sending Tips to his death. Tips misses the flight from which Flight Lieutenant Stanton and Jimmie Stafford fall to return. Later, Stanton returns, as from the dead, and sees Tips kissing his wife at the gate. He threatens to divorce her. Jane meets an admirer, Clive, at the Cafe de Paris, and runs into Tips. After Tips leaves she dances with Clive, who asks her to come to his apartment for a drink. Jane accepts his invitation.

Clive's eyes twinkled. "Why not indeed? But there could so easily be something in it if only you were willing. Still, I know when I'm beaten. I'd ask you to marry me if I thought I stood a chance. I've an idea I should be taking you home."

"You're right. I really ought to be going." She rose to her feet and a little involuntary shiver ran through her. "I'm cold and tired," she said wistfully. She pulled her velvet coat around her. She looked around for her evening bag and then abruptly the movement was arrested. At that moment the silence of the apartment was broken by the loud, eerie wail of an air raid warning. She made an effort and managed to speak normally. "A raid."

"Probably a false alarm."

Now it came again and others could be heard in the distance. There were police whistles in the street below and the sound of hurrying footsteps. "Scared?" asked Clive.

"Not a bit," she said, nor was she, once the first shock of it was over. "You forget I'm a WAAF," she smiled. "There's a good shelter in the basement," said Clive reassuringly. "I think I should take you down there."

They went out into the little hall of the apartment without undue haste and then opened the door leading to the corridor. As they did so the door of the opposite apartment also opened. Two women in dressing gowns emerged, one short and dark, the other one fair and slender. The second one looked at Jane and as their eyes met her expression changed. Her glance flickered to Jane's companion, took in, as it seemed, the implications of the situation with a lightning-like certainty of understanding.

Jane took a tight grip on herself. Iris Stanton. The very last person she could wish to see her emerging from Clive's flat at such an hour!

As she returned her curt nod of recognition her heart sank. She knew quite well what use Iris would make of this unexpected meeting.

Jane said at breakfast the next morning, "I saw your ex-husband last night. I merely ran into him when I was with Clive at the Cafe de Paris. And into the woman in the case just as I was emerging from Clive's quarters when the warning sounded. She was apparently staying in the apartment opposite. We had a little light conversation in the shelter."

"That must have been nice for you. Do you like her?"

"Not a bit, nor she me. Thank goodness that warning was a false one and over quickly. Otherwise we might have scratched each other's eyes out."

Stella reached for the butter and said a trifle wistfully that she wished this wasn't their last breakfast in the apartment.

"So do I. Shall I be able to stay in this new place you're going to?"

"Oh, yes. But it won't be anything like this." Jane looked sympathetically at Stella.

"Poor you!"

Stella smiled. "I'll be all right. I'll get through somehow. I've been hard up before. I remember when I first left Tips . . . Again there was a reminiscent look in her eyes."

Jane took a chance. She said she had been wanting to ask ever since she had met him, "You never told me what happened to make you go."

Stella stirred her coffee absently. "Didn't I?" Her eyes met Jane's across the table. "Do you want to hear?"

"Not if you don't want to talk about it," said Jane not altogether truthfully. Stella made a quick gesture. "Oh, I suppose I may as well. It's not a very pleasant story. There was another girl. It was when we were in Cairo. We'd only been married a few months. We squabbled and fought, but then hundreds of married couples do that and weather through. There was never anything really serious—and then this Fay Davies came out to stay with her uncle, who was a diplomatic attaché."

"I discovered that they'd been friends for years. She was lovely to look at and tremendously popular. She had a fiancé back in England, but Tips was the one who counted. I realized that the first moment I saw them together."

She paused for a moment and Jane didn't speak. She didn't want to disturb Stella's story. Now Stella was speaking again, in that hard, dry, expressionless voice, telling her of the gossip on the station. Then there had come a day when Tips and Fay had gone off for an excursion into the desert. They were to have returned that night, but it wasn't until late the following evening that they had put in an appearance. Both had been quite cool and offhand about what had happened. They'd driven off the beaten track and miles from anywhere there had been trouble with the car. They'd had to shelter for the night in a Bedouin camp and wait until they were able to get it repaired. We had an awful row over it. I wouldn't have minded if Tips had been honest with me, but he would insist that there was nothing in it. He just lied shamelessly about the whole thing . . ."

Jane interrupted her quickly, not knowing why she did so. "But suppose he wasn't lying to you . . .?"

Stella looked across the table at her. "Of course he was lying," she said with conviction.

"Tips said he'd never forgive me if I cited Fay in a divorce. So Tips and I had to drag through that sort of business of arranging the divorce. You can't imagine how dreadful that is."

Stella got up from the table and reached for her cigarettes and lit one with fingers that trembled. "Well, that's about all, she finished."

The story of Tips and the girl Fay haunted Jane. It was there at the back of her mind all the time she helped Stella finish packing. Stella's moving had certainly been enough to depress anyone. Jane had found it difficult to try to tell the older girl that she was sure she'd be all right. Even if she couldn't get any work in her own line, there must be something she could do. If only instead she'd married Rupert Grant.

Tips was stopping the car beside Jane and not looking at her at all kindly. She might have been any Waaf walking back from the railway station and not one in whom he had any special interest. "Thank you," said Jane and as he opened the door got in beside him.

They drove along for a few moments in silence. Then Jane said somewhat obviously, "So you got back safely?"

"Yes. And you've got back safely, too," he said, equally obviously. "I hear there was an air raid warning in town last night."

"Yes." She drew a quick breath. "I take it Mrs. Stanton told you she saw me?"

"She did. Funny you should all have met."

"Very funny. Such a pleasant encounter, too! It was a pity you weren't there as well. We should have been quite a jolly little party."

Tips shot her a furious glance from beneath lowered brows. "Isn't two o'clock in the morning an odd time to visit a man in his apartment?"

Jane turned in her seat and glared at him. "How dare you adopt such a tone to me? It is no business of yours."

He sent her a quick, almost furtive glance, and miraculously his expression seemed to change completely. The anger vanished from his eyes.

He slowed the car. She saw him glance up and down the long straight road. There was no one in sight. He stopped the engine and they sat there parked at the side of the road. Then he turned and looked at her. "Were you really enjoying yourself so much, darling?" he asked gently.

She gave a little laugh. "Of course I was."

Still his expression didn't change. He caught her hands and held them tightly. "I don't believe you."

She met his eyes unflinchingly. "Naturally you don't. That's because you're so conceited. You can't believe that any woman, if you're around, can find any other man attractive. But that's where you're mistaken. Clive and I . . ."

"Go on," he said, his voice now deadly quiet.

"Do I need to?" she said. "He let go her hands abruptly. "Certainly not," he said coldly. "You've made yourself perfectly clear. I'm sorry I've been such a fool over you. I, oh, what's the good of talking . . ."

"Tips . . ." The word was spoken in a whisper because she couldn't keep it back Her hand strayed out to his. But seemingly he didn't hear the whisper, and if he saw the hand he preferred to ignore it. Then he started the engine and with a roar they were on their way once more.

Jane took tight hold of herself. Deep within her bitter tears were flowing, more painful tears than any that could have been seen. Now the gates of the airdrome were in sight.

Tips, after dropping Jane and garaging his car, went to his billet. He was furiously angry. Why hadn't Jane given him the chance to say that when he had seen Iris at lunch today he'd had the most infernal row with her because of her attempt to disparage Jane? He hadn't had any hesitation then in avowing his belief in Jane's innocence. The upshot of it was that he'd told her he wasn't in love with her, that he never had been—that what was more important—he had never said he was, and that it was time they called an end to it. Guy, her husband, was a decent bloke, why couldn't she be satisfied with him?

In the midst of these recollections there was a tap on his door and Guy Stanton walked in.

The moment Tips looked at Guy he realized that the rows of the day hadn't finished. Guy's brows were knit, his lips were set, there was a nasty glitter in his eyes. "I want a word with you," he said.

"Sure," said Tips, and yelled for his batman When he came he told him to bring drinks. "Sit down," said Tips, waving to the only arm chair and seating himself on his camp bed.

Guy waited till the batman had brought the tray and departed. He remained silent as Tips poured out two stiff whiskies and sodas and handed one to him. Then he sat down heavily, his eyes fixed on Tips. "It's about Iris," he said.

"I guessed it," said Tips, sipping his drink. "Go ahead."

"I've come to ask you to lay off her."

Tips resolved on complete frankness, in fairness to himself and to everybody concerned. "I'm glad you've come. There's a good deal that can be cleared up between us," he said.

"In what way?" Guy glance was wary.

Tips put down his glass carefully on the table. He linked his strong hands and leaned forward. "Listen to me, old chap," he said gravely. "You're intending to divorce Iris. You're sure of your ground. You'll be doing yourself a great injustice if you follow it up. If you know when to believe a man, you'll believe me now."

"Iris is in love with you," Guy shot at him.

Tips shook his head. "No," he said. "She thinks she is. Iris is a person who loves gayety, change. She wants excitement. I see no earthly reason why she shouldn't have been with you. Don't bust up your marriage through revenge or spite or because you feel that you're not wanted. Who's to say in these uncertain times what will be the outcome of the new start?"

A couple of aviators had been shot down and were floating around the Pacific in their rubber boat when a Jap submarine surfaced and its crew called on the aviators to surrender. The flyers held a whispered conference.

"That's the stuff," said one to the other. "Let 'em thing we're giving up. Then, when they get close—we'll ram 'em."

We pass on the story of the correspondent's daughter who landed a Government job in Washington. Her first day on duty, she handled an incoming phone call. "Is Colonel So-and-so there?" the voice asked. The girl covered the receiver with her hand and asked her superior, "Colonel So-and-so has gone to the United Kingdom," she was informed. "I'm sorry," she said to the caller with gentle dignity, "but Colonel So-and-so is dead."

Point of Procedure

An interesting story has been told along Parliament Hill about Canada's demand to the Parliament in Great Britain for a constitutional amendment which had been necessary according to the British North America Act in order to postpone the redistribution of parliamentary representation in Canada until the end of the war. In the past, such a request would pass from the Governor-General to the Colonial Office, but more recently such a communication would go by way of the Department of External Affairs to the Secretary of State for the Dominions. Now, however, this latest demand or "address" of Canada's House of Commons and Senate for a constitutional amendment was presented by the Speakers of both Houses to the Governor-General who sent it to His Majesty the King and the Prime Minister sent it to the British Government through the High Commissioner of Canada in the United Kingdom.

Higher Degree of Intelligence

Canada's army has a comparatively high degree of intelligence and a very low degree or low percentage of men who are unable to read or write. Indeed, the proportionate of illiterates is extremely low. The latest information has disclosed that in the first three months of this year only one per cent were illiterate amongst the huge number of men entering the army from all walks of life and from every part of the country.

ST. PAUL'S Y. P. U.

The fortnightly meeting of St. Paul's Young People was held in the Sunday School Hall, Monday evening, November 8th. There was a good attendance despite the inclemency of the weather. The president, Mrs. D. Tucker opened the meeting with Hymn 236, followed by The Lord's Prayer in unison. Due to the absence of the secretary, Grant Stapley read the minutes of the last meeting. The business period followed, in which the minister read a pamphlet to the young people, telling of a conference at Bridge St. United Church, Belleville, to be held next Tuesday, Nov. 16th. He expressed his hope that the leaders of our Y. P. could be present at this worthwhile gathering. The offering was then received by Don Tucker. At this point the president turned the meeting over to Mr. Gray, who opened the devotional part with Hymn 245, followed by the reading of the Scripture Lesson.

Mr. Gray's address for the evening was on the famous Scotch poet, Francis Thompson. He told how Francis failed in the priesthood and as a medical student, thus too ashamed to return home sought refuge in London. It was during this London period he wrote his most famous poems. The best known of these is his "Hound of Heaven." Thompson was an opiate and after failing to receive recognition as a poet in the city he became a destitute his body rotting with consumption. Fortunately a kind newspaper publisher recognizing the genius in Thompson befriended him and took him to his home where he remained until his death in 1906. Mr. Gray read selections from Thompson's beautiful poems, which he stated were difficult to understand because the poet's words were rather languorous and oriental. However, the Y. P. felt that in the future they encountered any poems of Thompson's, we would always recall the tragic life of this 19th century poet. Hymn 251 was sung followed by The Mizpah Benediction.

ST. PAUL'S W. M. S.

St. Paul's W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Geo. Pollard, on Tuesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. R. A. Patterson was in the chair and in the devotional period was assisted by Mrs. Gordanier, who read a por-

VICTIM OF ROBBERY SAYS, "DON'T TAKE CHANCES"

Vancouver, Nov. 10.—Ernest H. Elsdon, driller in a local shipyard, came off the night shift recently to find his room burglarized and all his savings—$2,750 stolen. "If I'd had the sense to put that cash in a bank, I wouldn't have lost the $2,750 to a burglar," he said.

"I'd been saving that money to buy a house and all I've got left after months of work is a battered strong box. I made the mistake, you see, of keeping that money by me instead of putting it in the bank every day. Now I've got to start at the beginning again, but I'm going to stay at my job as a driller until I've got the money to buy that house. No more foolish risks for me. From now on I'm letting the bank keep my cash safe. It's tough luck, when you're getting on in years, to lose the very thing you've been counting on, but what I want to do is to let other people profit by my loss. Don't take chances—let the bank take care of your money and then you'll have it safe and sure for the things you want to buy when the war's over."

tion of Psalm 119 with comments thereon.

The program was varied, interesting and instructive. Mrs. Oliver Stapley's reading, "The Wrong Package," was based on the text, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have needs of." Remembrance Day was recognized in a poem read by Mrs. Patterson; a solo, "In Flanders Fields," by Miss Mae Currie, with Miss Grace Pittman accompanying, and a reading by Mrs. Ted Reynolds, "They sleep in Flanders." This was followed by a hymn for the men at the Front. The 2nd chapter of the Study Book was given by Miss Della Caldwell, and Mrs. Macklin offered prayer for our Missionary, Miss Mabel Clazie.

In the business session which followed plans were completed for next Sunday morning's service when Miss Ida McKenzie will be the guest speaker in St. Paul's Church, the service sponsored by the W.M.S. Help for a needy family was carefully planned. Mrs. Patterson and Miss Caldwell are a nominating committee to look after the 1944 slate of officers. Letters in reply to condolences were received from Mrs. N. E. Eggleton and Mrs. Richardson. Mrs. Pollard listed the contents of the bale which was valued at $50.00. Other secretaries reporting were Community Friendship, Peace, Christian Stewardship and Literature. Missionary Monthly subscriptions are due, and members are reminded that all names should be in by the end of December—not so far away. The Mission Band leader, Mrs. H. Wells, also reported for the Band, and Mrs. D. Gray for the Mission Circle. There were 24 members present and a few visitors.

Red Cross Notes

Over fifty ladies were out at Red Cross rooms last Friday, knitting, sewing, quilting. Were you there? Supplies are urgently needed at headquarters. Let us set Friday afternoon apart for Red Cross work. It is so little to ask, when some have given their all.

Fifty-five boxes have been packed and mailed to our boys overseas to cheer their Christmas. Two boxes have been sent, to be given to soldiers without a Christmas parcel. The Stirling Red Cross Society is very grateful to the local merchants who co-operated so willingly. Each box includes a fruit cake, shaving soap, note paper and envelopes, razor blades, tooth brush and paste, tins of ham, chicken, postum, milk, noodle soup, hot chocolate, chocolate bars, gum, chicklets, pencil, shoe polish, soap, and a Christmas card.

The Red Cross Bridge and Euchre Marathon will begin the week of Jan. 2nd. Anyone wishing to play please phone Mrs. Clifford Hutton, 359. Names to be in by Dec. 15th. Mrs. R. Hermiston and Mrs. MacConnell, Jr., were added to the entertainment committee.

RIVER VALLEY STUDY GROUP

A meeting of unusual interest was held by the Study Group, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Kane, on Oct. 20th, at the home of Mrs. Beatty, with an attendance of eighteen members and visitors.

Hymn 133 was sung, followed by prayer by the President. The minutes of the June meeting and Secretaries' reports were given.

It was decided to continue sending birthday cards and Christmas boxes to the elderly people of the neighborhood as they were greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Alex Bush read the Scripture Lesson: Philippians I: 30—11. "How to get the most from the Missionary Monthly" with special reference to the Sept. issue was given by Mrs. Roy Bush. "The Glory of a Garden" read by Mrs. Chard, was followed by a piano solo by Mrs. Percy Hubble. Mrs. Hanna gave a reading, "When Sarah Buys a Coat."

The President, then introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Helliwell, who chose as her subject, "China". From her firsthand knowledge, having spent eight years as a missionary there, where she went as a bride in 1914, she delivered a very interesting address, describing some of her experiences in China, closing with the Lord's Prayer in Chinese.

Mrs. Kane and Mrs. Roy Bush voiced the appreciation of the Study Group for her fine address.

Hymn 137 was sung and Mr. Gray closed the meeting with prayer.

A very dainty lunch was served by the hostess and a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 17th, at the home of Mrs. Alex Bush.

OUR GLORIOUS NAVY

You brag about your army,
Your glorious airforce too.
Do you ever think of your navy?
And the job they have to do?

No same man ever sails the seas
And expects to live it through,
So thank the stars you have the tars
Who wear the navy blue.

We don't fly over cities;
Or march with heavy pack,
But the navy always gets you there
And always brings you back.

There is never more than a whistle
As we shove off to sea,
We protect your precious merchant fleet
From the ruthless enemy.

No frantic crowds to see us off;
No commotion in the town,
And when we're lost in action,
It's just another ship gone down.

We face the cold Atlantic,
The icebergs, snow and sleet,
No matter what the sacrifice
For us there's no retreat.

We are beaten by the angry seas;
Torpedoed by the Huns,
Bombed by enemy aircraft,
And blasted by their guns.

We are freezing on the upper deck,
It's awfully hot below,
We are battered, bruised and broken,
But the convoy must go.

We guard your vital food supplies,
Your planes, and guns, and tanks,
For their existence over there
To navy boys give thanks.

So give credit to your army,
And your air-force, when it's due,
But we would like you to remember
You have a navy too.

HOLSTEIN COW IS NEW LIFETIME CHAMPION

A new Canadian Record for Lifetime Production of Milk over all breeds, and regardless of times milked daily, has just been established by Colony Fieta Hello, a member of the purebred Holstein herd of Colony Farm, Essondale, B.C. She has produced on official Record of Performance Test a total of 216,142 lbs. of milk containing 7,208 lbs. of butterfat in eight lactations. It has been estimated that if this tremendous volume of milk were bottled in quarts, the bottles would, if placed side by side, stretch for approximately five and one half miles, or if it were possible to pile them one on top of another, a column would be formed towering into the skies to twice the height of lofty Mount Everest. "Fieta" is also the Canadian Champion for milk production for one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, and eight consecutive lactations. She is also second amongst Canadian Holsteins for butterfat for from three to eight lactations, inclusive, having been beaten only by Springbrook Snow Countess, owned by T. R. Dent, Woodstock, Ontario, the World Champion

DR. LUMB BAGS DEER IN CAR COLLISION

Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft, warden of Hastings county, bagged his deer this season but without use of firearms.

While driving to Belleville Tuesday morning a deer leaped into the path of his car on Highway 62, north of Millbridge. The animal met sudden death, but the car was a partial casualty too.

The grill, headlights and fenders were damaged considerably, and all in all it was an expensive deer.

A grocer had difficulty with a doctor who was backward in paying his bills, so he put the matter in the hands of a collector. The man returned looking worried.

"What's the matter?" asked the grocer. "What did the doctor say?" "Well," replied the collector, "he said I wasn't looking well, examined my tongue and advised me to remain indoors for a few weeks."

MRS. MARGARET BELL

In the death of Mrs. Margaret Bell, wife of Mr. D. Bell, of Bonarlaw, who died at the Green Nursing Home, Stirling, Monday, November 8th, after a long illness, this community has lost a much beloved and respected citizen. Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Donald McDermid, she was born at Rob Roy village, Grey County, 72 years ago, and for the past 41 years has resided at Bonarlaw. She was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, and until her health failed was prominent in church and community work, being president of Springbrook Women's Institute during the last Great War. She was of a cheerful and generous disposition and will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends.

The funeral service, which was largely attended, was held at the Duffin Funeral Home, Stirling, on Tuesday evening and was conducted by Rev. W.H.V. Walker, of St. Andrew's Church. The remains were taken to Stayner, Ont., on Wednesday for interment.

Surviving are her husband, one son, Lieut. John A. Bell, of Royal Canadian Engineers, Victoria, B.C., four brothers and two sisters.

C. H. H. S. Rugby Championship Won By Stirling High School

Defeated Madoc On Their Home Grounds 9-0 — Will Play St. Mike's Tuesday

Playing in a snowstorm, on a wet, muddy field, the Stirling H. S. Grid-ers won their third C.H.H.S. championship in four years on Friday afternoon last, when they defeated Madoc in a thrilling game on the latter's grounds. The Stirling team, still smarting from their defeat of 7-6 by the Tweed team two weeks ago, went into the game with a real fighting spirit and came out with a 9-0 win.

1st Quarter

Stirling kicked off to Madoc to open the game. "Sunny" White ran the 50-yard kick back to the Madoc 15 yard line. After two unsuccessful line plunges Madoc kicked. Stirling, after a plunge by Patterson which took the ball from the Madoc 40 to their 35 yard line, kicked and McIntosh's booting scored a point in the first few minutes. The play was quite even in this quarter with each team using line plunges in abundance not risking any fumbles with the slippery ball. Stirling had 5 first downs to 1 for Madoc.

Score—Stirling 1; Madoc 0.

2nd Quarter

The second quarter saw the Stirling line open up big holes in the Madoc line and Patterson, Bastedo and Haslett took the ball for large gains. The work of the Stirling line of Bastedo, Thompson, Sine, Haslett, Hermiston, Reid and B. Jackman was a big factor in this quarter—plus some good ball carrying by the backfielders.

With one minute of the quarter left, Patterson plunged from the 2-yard stripe for a major score. The whole Stirling team worked as one on this play and made a major score certain. The convert, a forward from Bastedo to Jackman failed.

3rd Quarter

The 3rd quarter was only a few minutes old when McIntosh booted another single for Stirling. Madoc tried desperately to get a man in the clear on end runs but the plays were stopped cold by the Stirling linemen, who were tackling with a vengeance. Jack Hermiston, Grenville Sine and Thompson being especially good. Patterson and Haslett made large gains on plunges in this quarter and Bastedo did some neat quarterbacking. Towards the last of the quarter, McIntosh again kicked another single point.

Score at end of quarter—Stirling 8; Madoc 0.

4th Quarter

Once again Madoc tried desperately to get back into the game but the Stirling line held them for only minor gains. The Stirling squad maintained an offensive in the last quarter and large gains were made by Bastedo and Haslett on end runs while Patterson picked up 2 first downs on plunges. After a 35-yard downfield march which stopped on the Madoc 30-yard line McIntosh again punted a single point. The game ended in a wild mix up with many punches being swung but very few landing. Perhaps if the Madoc team had put as much fight into their playing as they did in the aftermath they would have made a much better showing.

Final Score—Stirling 9; Madoc 0.

To pick a star for the Stirling squad would be very difficult, because every player gave his very best. The team played for the game for Stirling. B. Bastedo, Patterson, Haslett all played well and made large gains for the Stirling squad. McIntosh was booting the pigskin far and wide—and up in front the line more than held their own and they were largely responsible for the Stirling win. For Madoc, "Sunny" White was the only threat and he played a fine game.

Attend Service At St. Andrew's

Members of the Hon. J. R. Cooke Chapter of the I.O.D.E., the Girl Guides and Brownies attended Divine Service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning.

Rev. W.H.V. Walker, minister, conducted the impressive Remembrance Day Service and after welcoming the three organizations delivered an inspiring address on the subject "Loyalty to God and Country."

"The words God and country belong together. Freedom and religious liberty, the choicest flowers of human civilization, were born in same soil—a soil watered by sacrifice. One of your laws is love to your country and God. Your organizations seek not only to promote loyalty, but Unity, as represented by these two beautiful flags at the front.

"Our Empire is like a bundle of sticks. It might be fairly easy to break if you take each one separately—Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, India, Africa, Br. W. India; but when they are all bound tightly together by the bond of patriotism the whole bundle is unbreakable. That cord of patriotism is represented by our Christian King. So long as every one of us tries to do his or her part—our very best to carry out challenge of these days, so long will our nations remain strong, happy, united and free," stated Mr. Walker.

"The other corner stone of your organizations is Kindness," which was illustrated by appropriate stories.

"All this leads to Peace and peace only secured by sacrifice," concluded Rev. Walker.

Special music was rendered by the choir and included an anthem, "Our Nation's King," and duet, "Peacefully Slumber," by Mrs. Chas. Farney and Mrs. Roy Eggleton.

During the offertory, Miss Grace Pitman, A.T.C.L., organist, played two compositions composed by Mr. Bruce McConnell, of Fort William, and dedicated to his niece, Miss Lorna McConnell, of town.

better efficiency of this country's railways, with the latest news showing that actually a new monthly record was established in September of 1943 for tonnage of revenue freight loaded. The record figure was no less than 8,981,000 tons as compared with the previous highest mark of 8,749,000 tons of October in 1942. Last year, the September figure was 7,692,000 tons so that the gain was 16.7 per cent. The total for the nine months of this year has been indicated as 72,929,999 tons as compared with 67,000 tons in the same period of last year or an actual increase of 8.3 per cent, with the total number of cars loaded by Canadian railways in that period being 2,530,000 tons as against 2,501,000 last year.

The man-in-the-street throughout Canada will be deeply impressed with the report in Ottawa that this country's spectacular industrial and commercial growth on account of the war has caused this nation's total external trade in the first seven months of 1943 to reach the almost unbelievable figure of $1,000,000,000.

Entertainment Well Patronized

Some seventy-six dollars was realized for Red Cross purposes as the result of the pie social and play held in the Rawdon Town Hall, at Harold, on Tuesday evening. A large crowd greeted the members of the Ivanhoe Dramatic Club for their presentation of "The Man in the Green Shirt." Each character was well portrayed and the members of the cast are to be congratulated on their work. Following the play a pie social was enjoyed by the gathering.

Coupled with the entertainment was the reopening of the Township Hall which has recently undergone extensive repairs. The outer walls have been repointed, and the interior replastered and painted, while a canopy has been erected over the door. As a result the building has a much improved appearance and many fine compliments were heard on its attractiveness. The masonry work was done by Herbert Spencer and Son and the painting by Messrs N. White and Arthur Reid.

Reeve W. J. Tanner acted as master of ceremonies throughout the evening.

Maynes Family Is Honoured

Given Floor Lamp By Their Friends in the Community
Prior To Moving To Stirling

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Maynes was filled with neighbors and friends on Friday evening, when they gathered to express their gratitude to the Maynes' family for their years of fine service to the community, in which they have resided for eighteen years. They have purchased a home in Stirling.

Mr. George Weaver capably filled the duties of chairman for the evening. After voicing the regret of the neighbours at losing the Maynes' family from the community, he called on Mr. Don Campbell, who conducted a round of community singing with Mrs. Carleton Potts at the piano.

Piano solos were rendered by Mrs. Ross Hoard, and Mrs. Arthur Pyear. Lois Weaver and Ruth Rose sang a duet, "Sonny Boy"; Mrs. Edgar McKeown and Mr. Clarence Seenev each contributed delightful humorous readings: Mr. Don Campbell and Mrs. John Holmes, a musical selection, Mr. Gilbert Hagerman spoke a few words of appreciation of the Maynes' family.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs read an address, and Mr. Campbell made the presentation of a tri-light floor lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Maynes feelingly replied to the address, inviting all to visit them in their new home in Stirling.

All joined in singing, "For they are jolly good fellows,—Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian Love," and The National Anthem.

The ladies served a delicious light lunch, and all enjoyed a social hour.

The address follows:—
Dear Mr. and Mrs. Maynes, Florence and Mildred,—

We meet here tonight with mingled feelings of happiness and regret. Happiness, because it is always a pleasure to spend an evening with you; regret, that you are so soon to leave us to make your home elsewhere.

Since coming to our community some years ago, we have found you, one and all, true friends and neighbours, ready and willing to give unreservedly of your aid and sympathy wherever needed.

You have always indeed gone the "second mile." You have shared our joys; you have shared our sorrows, and have very effectively carried on the traditions of good neighborliness. It has been truly said, "to have friends one must show himself friendly." This, too, you have done in no small way.

Some poet has said that "The little nail of being friends, is one that never never ends," also "Friendship is a golden chain, binding our lives together." We pray that the strong links in friendships' chain, welded together by long years of happy fellowship may never be broken, and that you will often wander back to visit your friends in this community. Using the words of a popular song, "The more we get together, the happier we'll be."

As a slight token of the respect and affection we have for you, we ask you to accept this gift.

Rest assured that with the gift go the best wishes of hosts of friends, who wish for you the richest of Heaven's blessings in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours of Anson and vicinity.
Don Campbell, Frank Jeffs, Carleton Potts.

BEWARE THIN ICE

Now is the time of year when the perils of thin ice are prevalent. The village pond has frozen over a couple of mornings recently and some of the more venturesome lads will undoubtedly be trying it out before it is safe. Parents and school teachers would be doing a good deed if they remind the boys and girls of the dangers of going on the ice before they are absolutely sure of its safety. Too many tragedies occur just because some youngster wants to be the first to skate on some pond, lake or river.

CHEAPER HYDRO FOR FARMS

Good news for hydro users in the rural parts of Ontario was contained in the announcement on Monday of the adoption of a uniform power rate for all rural areas and the elimination of service charges to farmers. The new rates are to become effective January 1st next and will effect some 129,000 rural users. The adjustment and simplification of rates will bring cheaper current to farms, hamlets and rural users, resulting in an estimated saving of over half a million dollars. This will be accomplished without any increase for urban consumers. The change in rates according to Premier Geo. Drew, was made possible by the introduction of more efficient methods of handling rural power distribution. The change also conforms with a resolution introduced by the progressive-conservatives at the last session of the Legislature and implements point 13 of its 22-point election program.

As has been said by Premier Drew, "No expenditure made by the farmer produces greater financial returns than the money he pays for electric energy."

THESE ARE OUR CHILDREN

"They shall inherit the earth."

"Yes, we believe this, but first comes the primary need of keeping the heritors alive to possess their own," says Otto Zoff in a powerful article given prominence in the November issue of Survey Graphic magazine.

"What have we done to the children of the world," Mr. Zoff asks. What is to become of them? Something has occurred that is beyond man's ability to grasp."

For about 150 years there has been a steadily growing movement to protect the lives of children, their health and their spiritual development, the author mentions, reviewing in particular the seeming awakening of the nations, in the breathing space between the wars, to the rights and needs of children everywhere. Then came the undoing. Bombs, gunfire, famine and slavery have broken the bodies of hundreds of thousands of children and youth lies crumpled with the noble resolutions of yesterday.

In their thankfulness that bombs and famine have not yet touched their children, Canadians are prone to overlook that there are other enemies that prey on child life.

It is estimated that since the present war began, 86,000 infants have died in Canada—thousands of them from diseases that could have been prevented if their parents had protected them by simple, available methods.

"Throughout Canada last year there were nearly 3,000 cases of diphtheria and more than 18,000 cases of whooping cough," according to Dr. E. Couture, director of the Division of Child and Maternal Hygiene, Federal Department of Pensions and National Health.

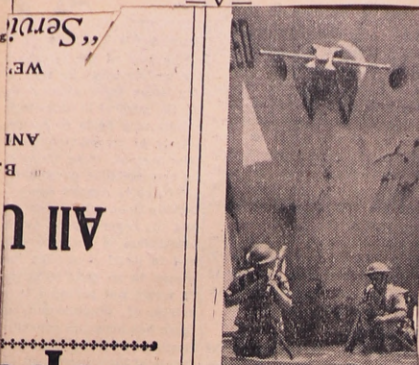

"These two preventable diseases caused over 800 deaths. One marvels that parents are so slow and negligent in having their children safe-guarded when the means are so harmless and so readily available."

The infant mortality rate for British Columbia in 1942 was 35 per 1,000 live births. The rate for Canada was 54. "If the national rate was 35 per 1,000 births, it would mean a saving of about 5,000 babies in one year," Dr. Couture points out.

Five thousand more babies! And Canada is talking about the need of greatly accelerated immigration after the war! Wouldn't 5,000 babies, to be raised to citizenship in Canadian homes, be the best immigrants Canada could obtain?

From November 14 to 20 is National Immunization Week in Canada. During this week the public health authorities and the Health League of Canada are urging parents everywhere to protect their children against whooping cough, small pox, diphtheria and scarlet fever. This newspaper heartily commends the effort to arouse parents to their responsibility.

It is said that "a nation marches forward on the feet of its little children." Surely, children are our most precious asset. Let us make sure that more of them will live to inherit Canada.

THE NEW MEDAL

Now that the Canada Medal has been designed, it may be too late to nominate recipients. It would not be surprising if the first Canadian Honors List had already been prepared with due regard to geological, racial and political considerations.

If there still is a vacancy on the honors list, it is hoped that it will be reserved for an unknown Canadian citizen, perhaps an undiscoverable one, who deserves all honors that are in his country's gift.

His citation will read: "John Blank, who, since September, 1939, has never excused his own shortcomings or those of the business, profession or civil service department with which he is associated, by uttering these words or their equivalent: 'Don't you know there's a war on?'"—The Printed Word.

The Winchester press reports cattle thieves active in that area. It is presumed that the cattle are being slaughtered for the "black market". While no losses have been reported in this district, farmers would be well advised to keep a close check on their young cattle.

Effective on Monday of this week there was an increase of 75 cents per hundred pounds on all bacon for export to the United Kingdom. It is expected this will result in a raise in the price level for all hogs marketed, which will be more than welcome to the farmers.

Toronto police are searching for a young promoter who is advertising for sale for the price of twenty-five cents a book entitled "The Innermost Secrets of a Happy Married Life." Excited brides have found the "secrets" to be cooking recipes. Who knows but that he is right.

Congratulations are extended the local High School rugby squad on winning the Centre Hastings High School Rugby Championship by defeating Madoc on Friday last. This is the third championship for the local school in four years and the boys are deserving of all the honours.

The municipal election pot is beginning to boil in a number of adjacent municipalities where they hold their elections early in December instead of in January. Stirling and adjoining townships continue with the old order of things and will consider their municipal affairs during the New Year season.

Complaints have been heard from motorists that young boys in this village have been removing valve caps from the tires of automobiles parked along the streets. Such action may be considered smart by the perpetrators, but there is really nothing clever or smart about it. It is understood these caps are difficult to procure and those responsible for taking them are certain to find themselves in trouble if caught.

The colder weather has arrived and players and fans are thinking about the prospects of hockey in the village this coming winter. At present they are none too bright, since it is even rumoured that the rink will not open. Some decision in the matter will be made very soon. Meanwhile, a reorganization meeting of the local hockey club will be held in the Agricultural Rooms on Monday night, when the local situation will be discussed from all angles. Fans and players should all be on hand.

What Others Say

CONTINUING NUISANCE

Changes galore are expected in the post-war auto. But there'll still be the same hack-saw driver. — Kingston Whig-Standard.

ONE CERTAINTY

There is an argument on as to whether depression will follow this war. One thing is as certain as the sun rises, there will be dislocation, and those who have a nice bunch of Victory Bonds in the bag will be better prepared for it.—St. Catharines Standard.

TOO MUCH REGIMENTATION

A discharged navy man, who has spent more than three years on convoy duty in this war, and served in the Royal Navy in the last war, is wondering what kind of freedom he has been fighting for. His complaint is that he has earned the right to look for the job he desires. Instead of which he has to go to Selective Service, who, he says, have not the kind them," said Capt. Ralph Cleworth. In addition, he could not advertise in the daily papers for a job unless he got permission to do so from Selective Service. He maintains that he was under orders all the time he was in the service, and now he is out of it through disabilities, he is still more regimented.

He believes that service men who are discharged from the services should not have to go through selective service and that they have earned the right to find whatever job they like. In other words, there should be preference for these men.—Thomas Richard Henry in Toronto Telegram.

UNCLE HY.

We take it that success is not, a fat account in some big bank, a country home, a yacht, a plane, a record showing a state and rank, a limousine, a private car, a knowledge of the lands afar.

We take it that success is sure, to him who in his modest day, has raised some daughters and some sons, and brought them up the proper way, for what is wealth and what is fame, with no one left to bear the name.

Yes, wealth alone is not success, it's potent, true, and courted much, but in the last analysis, we prize it perhaps too overmuch, but sons and daughters, yes, my friend, without such, the world would end.—Trenton Courier-Advocate.

WELL-KNOWN HERE

Arthur Alloway, who came to Trenton, some twenty years ago and bought and amalgamated The Trenton Courier and The Trenton Advocate and purchased The Stirling-News-Argus as part of a plan to control a chain of papers in the Trent Valley, is now the owner of The Oshawa Times-Gazette and The Cobourg Sentinel-Star.

Mr. Alloway sold the Trenton paper to Cance Statia, the Stirling paper to Allan Donald, and joined the Munday-Goodfellow company in Oshawa in the ownership of the business of which he has now become the sole owner.—Trenton Courier-Advocate.

COST OF LIVING BONUS IN INDUSTRY INCREASED

Following the increase (as of October 1, 1943) of 1.4 points in the adjusted cost of living index announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the National War Labour Board issued a General Order today that cost of living bonuses be increased accordingly commencing with the first payroll period beginning on or after November 15, 1943.

In the case of adult male employees and of other employees receiving weekly wage rates of $25.00 or more per week, the amount of the weekly increase will be 35 cents; for male employees less than 21 years of age and female employees, whose weekly wage rates are less than $25.00 per week, the increase will be 1.4 per cent of their weekly wage rates.

This increase is compulsory for all employers who are subject to the Wartime Wages Control Order, P.C. 5963, and the 35 cent or 1.4 per cent upward adjustment must be added to all cost of living bonuses presently being paid to employees who are not above the rank of "Foreman."

The maximum weekly bonus will now be $4.60, or 18.4 per cent of the weekly wage rates, as the case may be.

The Board's General Order does not affect the provisions of its special direction made last June for manual workers in the construction industry following representations from the National Joint Conference Board of that industry.

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Even the thrills of life on the Alaskan highway were not enough for Steven Moran and it is not at all surprising, for Steven is a veteran of three years in the Imperial Army—seventeen months of which he spent battling with the natives of torrid East Africa in Tanganyika.

So Steven, a handsome dark-skinned English chap with a Clark Gable mustache—was at Fort Osborne's Reception Centre one recent early morning trying to get into the Canadian Army.

He didn't make it. He has already been discharged from the Imperial Army for medical reasons. If determination was all that the medical officers required from a man, then Steven Moran would be in the Army. As a matter of fact, he would have been in the Air Force at Montreal right after he arrived back from England some time ago.

The adventuresome Englishman was in Ottawa when the war first broke out. So away he went back to his old home town, London, England, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Moran used to reside before Tottenham district was bombed out.

Mr. Moran declared that the climate in East Africa is "hot." But he liked his East African sojourn in spite of sultry days and danger-filled nights. The Alaskan highway was dull for this young Imperial Veteran though.

He likes his thrills terrific—and often.

Training in Manitoba

Six men from Military District No. 3, were included in a group of 47 Artillery reinforcement officers taken on strength of the A 4 Artillery Training Centre, Fort Brandon Barracks, Man., recently on transfer from officer training centres at Gordon Head, B. C., and Brockville, Ont., where they had qualified for their commissions. They will take advanced training there to qualify for the rank of full lieutenants. They are from nearly every province in the Dominion.

Second Lieutenants William G. Haynes, and Raymond E. Simms were transferred from Brockville, and 21 Lieutenants Clayton H. Betts, John A. MacKenzie, Warren L. McBride and Herbert C. Rogers were transferred from Gordon Head.

Army Jottings

Major R. G. Pickrell, Winnipeg Grenadiers, one of the world's champion pistol shots and a Blaisie rifle marksman, has been appointed second in command of the Canadian small arms school at Long Branch, Ont., and chief instructor of the school.

It's an old rule, but probably not generally known to troops, especially newer members of the active army—namely, they can't take their mascots with them overseas.

"Dogs, Domestic Pets or Animal Mascots cannot be accepted for shipment in transport."

Reserve Army members whose term of service expires during this war will be required to serve an additional year before they are discharged, National Defence Headquarters said today. Men who enlisted in the Reserve Army prior to January 2, 1949, were at least "for the term of three years or until legally discharged."

In peacetime such men would be entitled to be discharged on completion of three years' service. But when the three-year term is completed in a time of emergency, an additional twelve-months must be served. Such personnel may, of course, re-enlist for the duration of the war if they desire.

"What's holding you back brother?"

THE fellows who are in there pitching at the Axis didn't need any formal invitation to race into this scrap... and they're beginning to wonder what happened to you. Those fellows are in the thick of things... smooth-working teams of fighters... each man doing his part.

Besides real he-man action and adventure, you'll get skilled technical training and experience that employers will rate highly after the war.

If you really want to pull your fair share, and if you're fit, there's not a thing in the world to hold you back. You can go aircrew today. You can win your wings in a few short months under the guidance of veteran airmen. What about it, brother?

NEWS FOR THE BUSY FARMER

500 BUSHELS OF POTATOES TO ACRE CAN BE PRODUCED

Although the average yield of potatoes for Ontario last year was estimated at 98 bushels per acre, this amount can be substantially increased if efficient production methods are practiced. Practical proof of this statement is given by the results of a 500 bushel per acre contest held by the Potato Committee of the South Simcoe Branch of the Ontario Crop Improvement Association.

Three growers who entered the contest succeeded in attaining the objective of 500 bushels per acre. They were Herb Dunn, Cookstown, who produced 516 bushels on a measure acre; Oscar Whiteside, Egbert, with 512 bushels and J. Nichol Wilson, Alliston, with 507.6 bushels. Mr. Dunn, the winner, was presented with a handsome gold watch and each received a certificate of merit for their outstanding achievements. Of the 23 members who entered the contest, four others succeeded in producing more than 400 bushels per acre. They were Thompson Banting, Geo. Drennan, Warren McKenzie and W. H. Ruthven, all of Alliston.

Simcoe County takes the lead for Ontario in potato production and the vicinity of Alliston is the most concentrated commercial late potato producing area in the county. The northern section of Simcoe County, in the vicinity of La Fontaine, is noted as a specialized seed producing area, a recent survey having revealed that more than 70,000 bushels of excellent quality certified seed were produced there this past season.

During the past season, says R. E. Goodin, of the Crops, Seeds and Weed Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, increased attention has been given in many potato producing areas throughout the Province to efficient production by means of improved cultural practices, use of fertilizers and protection of the growing crop by spraying and dusting. The result has been a noticeable improvement in the quality of tubers and also an increase in production per acre in such cases.

KEEP CONSUMPTION BACON, HAM, PORK REASONABLE LIMITS

Britain's requirements of Canadian bacon and hams and other pork products are such that it is necessary that Canadians continue to keep domestic consumption within reasonable limits, if the minimum export quantities are to be assured, the Meat Board stated.

Although the Meat Board has already announced the lifting of restrictions on slaughter and domestic distribution of hogs and pork products, any appreciable increase in domestic consumption can only mean that smaller quantities of bacon will be available for export to Britain. Consequently, retailers are asked to continue to co-operate with the Meat Board by refraining from featuring bacon, hams or fresh pork in advertising and store displays.

The Meat Board states that the total supply of meats in Canada is ample to provide the quantities required under the rationing system of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Consumers are therefore able to satisfy their full ration requirements without materially increasing their purchase of pork products.

FARMER IS KEY-MAN OF RECONSTRUCTION

For the re-establishment of a prosperous agriculture in Canada, many schemes have been proposed in reference to large works programs, Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms Service, told the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at its recent meeting, but, he said, while these schemes soundly conceived would make for a modern, much improved and more permanent agriculture in Canada, agricultural reconstruction must start with the farmer himself. He must have facilities whereby he may improve his business. That, said Dr. Archibald, obviously involved cheaper credit, comparable at least to that which is available to industry. The farmer alone can rebuild his business, his home, and his soils. Farmers of Canada would certainly prefer fair prices for their products without subsidies, bonuses and subventions. No doubt there will be a transition, but the peacetime program of agriculture cannot be built on the vagaries of insecure and changing factors of that kind.

FERTILIZER SUPPLIES

Farmers are urged to make immediate arrangements for fertilizers they will need next spring and to accept delivery during the winter months. Owing to the present problems of transportation, labour and storage, it is necessary to keep the fertilizers moving from the plants if the manufacturers are to meet the farmers' needs. About 500,000 tons of fertilizer of the different kinds are expected to be available in Canada for the spring of 1944. This is almost double the quantity used a few years ago, so it is a question of avoiding peak labour loads in the fertilizer plants, preventing overloading of transportation facilities and relieving the storage situation.

No one can accurately estimate the extent of the demand for fertilizer that may develop this coming season, states G. S. Peart, Fertilizers Administrator, but those best informed agree that it will be the heaviest in the history of Canada and the supply may not be sufficient. For this reason the farmer who orders early and accepts delivery early will be more sure of getting what he wants and will have it on hand when the time comes to use it. He will also make a distinct contribution to food production in making it possible for the fertilizer plants to get the fertilizer out to best advantage of all concerned.

POULTRY FEATHERS MORE THAN COSTUME

Good stock, good condition, and good production give the poultryman, a pride in his work. By the same token, bare backs and feather pulling proclivity in a flock cast a reflection on good management, because these conditions reveal deficiencies in feeding. Green feed, consisting of second or third crop alfalfa or clover, is not only a great conditioner in the fall but also seems to contain some protein coefficient that helps to give a lustre to the plumage.

Hens have a high body temperature and they need their feathers to keep warm, particularly in winter time, and warmth is essential to maintained production. The loss of feathers means higher production costs, and is a menace to health as well. In summer time, full plumage provides effective insulation against the heat of the sun. Observation by Canadian poultry authorities shows that birds which are kept busy, fed ample green feed, and are not overcrowded, rarely lack a full coat of feathers.

BETTER TO BUDGET FARM INCOME

Although a farm budget scarcely ever works out as planned, still he who budgets is likely to come out better than he who trusts to luck, says W. D. Albright, Superintendent of the Beaverlodge Experimental Station. Speaking from thirty years' frontier experience, budgeting gives one a grasp of one's business and is a wholesome check on "big eyes". It warns against counting on one dollar to do the work of two or three. An annual budget is good; a monthly one is better.

Commence a budget by estimating the income. First set down the assured resources such as cash in hand, bank deposits, grain in bins, etc., and total these. Add the two sums, remembering always that the bird in the hand is the only one to count upon. Now set down the fixed expenditures: taxes, interest, insurance premiums and the like. Total these.

Then put down the ordinary expenditures, such as food, clothing and repairs. Total them. Add these two totals and compare with the probable income. If there is not enough income begin trimming sail.

In the happy event of a probable surplus see how far it will go toward the new stove or combine. Make a list of the things desired and decide what are most urgent, not forgetting Victory Bonds.

1. Balance the assured income against the definite commitments.

2. Balance total probable income against total probable outlay.

3. Figure how to spend any probable surplus to the best advantage, but only after it is received.

Such budgeting helps one to see the end from the beginning, as all good business men try to do.

"I wonder why three-fourths of the typists in business offices are women?" "I should say it is because men like to feel that there is at least one class of woman whom they can dictate to!"

NAME REGISTERED

Mr. Allan B. McComb, Bonarlaw, has registered the name "Glencolomb" with the National Live Stock Records for his exclusive use in naming the purebred Holstein cattle bred on his farm. All his stock will, in future, carry this name as a prefix.

NEW CANADIAN RECORD AVERAGE OF $1037 AT HOLSTEIN SALE

The highest average price ever made at a consignment sale of Canadian Holsteins, and the highest on the continent since 1920, was established at Oakville, November 11, when 69 head sold for $71,610, an average of $1,037 at the All-Canadian Sale. The top price of $5,100 was paid by Glenn L. Bancroft, Flint, Mich., for Meadowwood Abbecker Rag Apple, a two-year old heifer consigned by C. J. Chandler, Hudson Heights, Quebec. Hays & Co., Calgary, received the second highest price of $2,700 from Van Hoosen Farms, Rochester, Mich., for a six-year-old cow. Hays & Co. also consigned the top bull, Hays' Great Journey who went to H. J. McFarland, Picton, at $2,000. Altogether 24 head sold for at least $1,000 and eight reached the $2,000 mark. Approximately 2,000 attended the sale and consignors and buyers were from five provinces and three states.

Turn of Events Increase Tension

It is advisable that the man-in-the-street should know that there is now an exceedingly anxious atmosphere of great sensibility backstage along Parliament Hill in regard to several disturbing and delicate domestic problems in the midst of wartime activities of the greatest interest. At the same time, an experienced judgment by this veteran observer of the hustle and bustle in this center of this nation's drama seems to confirm the belief that a strong feeling of expectancy prevails now in the capital about the unusually important and extensive legislative plans for the next session, though the lawmakers will not resume their seats and be ready for business until late in January, when, it is claimed, there will be likely heated discussions about the Government's discharge of responsibilities for functions on the home front as well as its prosecution of the war with the suspicion that these may be done with alacrity in view of the always existing possibility of a general election in the not too distant future and heightened by the recent turn of events or crisis in some domestic problems.

Trouble Foreseen

Notwithstanding the sensational headlines in the press or the news on the air announcing the recent outbreak of strikes in the coal mines of Western Canada, yet quite a long time prior to these announcements such action had been foreseen as a distinct probability in some quarters. In Ottawa, it had been known that dissatisfaction was common amongst these miners and that a walk-out was more than likely under the circumstances, though under the conditions of colder weather in certain sections of this country, the vital need for more and more coal in war industries and the possibility of a shortage in general, such interruption of fuel production was a most undesirable development, especially since the production of no less than 18,000,000 tons of coal had been considered as the essential goal for this year and this objective could not be attained if walk-outs or strikes threatened such production and these were not avoided. Important Statement

Food has been, and will continue to be even more so in future, a prime factor in this World War II and reports have shown steadily that this country is assuming a continuously growing importance. Indeed, the role which Canada has been playing in this drama on the international scene has been stressed again and gain, with none other than Canada's Minister of Agriculture, Hon. James G. Gardiner, offering the latest prediction that this country may be able to obtain the same total amount of food in the next year as in this year, though conditions may cause variations of production, including the probability of a decrease in the quantities of pork or even dairy products and the possibility of a net increase in beef, poultry and grains, depending in each case, of course, on the conditions of weather as well as the supplies of equipment and labor.

Economic Development

An important sign of Canada's economic developments or reactions in this war can be obtained by the man-in-the-street from the information released in the nation's capital about the much greater activities and much better efficiency of this country's railways, with the latest news showing that actually a new monthly record was established in September of 1943 for tonnage of revenue freight loaded. The record figure was no less than 8,981,000 tons as compared with the previous highest mark of 8,749,000 tons of October in 1942. Last year, the September figure was 7,892,000 tons so that the gain was 16.7 per cent. The total for the nine months of this year has been indicated as 72,929,999 tons as compared with 67,000,000 tons in the same period of last year or an actual increase of 8.3 per cent, with the total number of cars loaded by Canadian railways in that period being 2,530,000 tons as against 2,501,000 last year.

Business Boom

The man-in-the-street throughout Canada will be deeply impressed with the report in Ottawa that this country's spectacular industrial and commercial growth on account of the war has caused this nation's total external trade in the first seven months of 1943 to reach the almost unbelievable figure of $457,409,956, with the exports, excepting gold, being no less than the tremendous amount of $304,000,000. The meaning of these developments can be judged by the man-in-the-street when it is disclosed that during the same period of the first calendar year of this war, that is in 1940, Canada's total trade was only $191,000,000 as against this year's amount of $457,409,956 and the exports in that year were less than one-third of this year's figure. Moreover, it is most interesting to learn at the same time that Canada's exports to Britain in that same period of 1943 were $574,000,000 and the imports less than $80,000,000, producing an enormous credit in this country against the Motherland. However, the situation was different in the trade relations between Canada and the United States in that same period of this year since Canada's exports to the United States were $612,000,000 and her imports were $810,000,000. Nevertheless, a general analysis of Canada's transactions with other nations as revealed in these latest external trade figures in Ottawa stresses in no uncertain manner that the war has caused an unprecedented and historical change as well as growth in Canada's whole national economy, with the outlook for this country's position in trade on the international scene being much more impressive than it was before the outbreak of this war and being a subject of deep thought right now behind the scenes in the nation's capital.

Indians and Military Service

Notwithstanding any contrary opinions which may prevail, Canada's Indians as British subjects are liable to military service in this World War II, this having been a decision of the department of Justice in Ottawa and this decision having also been given in a test case in a court action in the Province of Quebec.

Notes of Optimism

Reflections of the general optimism existing along Parliament Hill in regard to the war have been shown lately in small things of big significance. This has been seen lately in the removal of certain restrictions in the retreading of tires. This has been seen lately in the easing of certain restrictions in the making of men's clothing whereby an extra pair of trousers or cuffs have been allowed. Now, a new optimistic note on the home front has been sounded in the latest hopeful report of cotton supplies for civilian use. While during the first eight months of 1943 production in the primary cotton textile industry in Canada was down about 12 per cent, yet it was reported that prospects for the fourth quarter of this year of 1,43 were fairly good.

PROTECT CONSUMER IN BUYING OF STOVES

Purchasers of used stoves from dealers are given protection under an order of the Prices Board which requires that when a sale is made the dealer must give the buyer a signed statement that the stove is in good working order. In the same statement he must agree that if it becomes defective within 90 days as a result of imperfect condition at the time of sale, he will repair it or replace the parts if replacements can be found. This applies to all sales of used stoves for heating or cooking, whether run by gas, wood, coal or a combination of those fuels.

ICE SKATES TO BE SUPPLIED DEALERS

About 100,000 pairs of ice skates are to be available this year for distribution to the trade throughout Canada. Dealers are to be supplied on quotas and the requirements of the armed forces are to receive first consideration.

Here was the beginning and down through history the Missionary enterprise has laid the foundations of sending the gospel of Jesus Christ to all peoples of the world regardless of race or colour. It is now up to the Christian people of the United Church of Canada to go the second mile and strengthen the work which has been built up through the years.

There were nineteen contestants and Neil won second prize with a comic number. He is now eligible to compete on December 15th at the Tom Hamilton Amateur held at Trenton Airport.

FRENCH CRUISER SINKS GERMAN BLOCKADE RUNNER

When the French Cruiser Georges Leygues sighted an unfamiliar ship, silhouetted in the light of the moon, in the South Atlantic, the British Naval Liaison Officer on board was called to the bridge to identify her. He immediately recognized her as a German type of ship, and a challenge was flashed. They received no reply and a second challenge was made. Then the mysterious ship altered course and put out a smoke screen. The Georges Leygues manoeuvred for position, and at about 3000 yards range opened fire. The first salvo tore the enemy's ship's funnel away, and the second started a fire. Five salvos were fired in all and the ship began to sink. There was an explosion followed by sparks and flames, and a column of smoke believed to be due to scuttling charges, came from where the funnel had been. The enemy crew had taken to the boats, and the Georges Leygues picked up two boat-loads of survivors. Altogether 50 prisoners were taken.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario.

Q.—Has any date been set for the expiration of canning sugar coupons?

A.—Yes. They will expire in the hands of consumers on December 31, along with tea or coffee and sugar coupons which remain in the No. 2 ration books.

Q.—Have any steps been taken to increase the supply of children's knitted underwear in the stores?

A.—Yes. Arrangements have been made whereby it will be available continuously during the winter months and buying may thus be spread over that period instead of being confined, as usual, to the fall and early winter period.

Q.—What is the legal ceiling for fuel-wood sales in this community?

A.—As the ceiling varies between section and section and sometimes between town and town, this information is being sent to you independently. Should you desire additional information, please enquire at the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Q.—How can I secure information in regard to making over used adult underwear for children's wear?

A.—If you will write to the Consumer's Branch, Arcade Building, 196 Sparks Street, Ottawa, it will be glad to provide such information.

Q.—I bought a rebuilt sewing machine recently which broke down in a week's time. Have I any recourse?

A.—Under an order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, the seller of a machine must give a 90-day written guarantee that the machine is in good order and will be repaired free of charge within that time limit, except in the case of disrepair caused by improper handling by the purchaser.

Q.—My grocer wanted to collect "D" coupons for black-strap molasses. Has he a right to do so?

A.—No. Black-strap molasses is unrationed.

Q.—A friend and I had an argument the other day about whether or not cheese was rationed in the United Kingdom. Can you tell me about this?

A.—Cheese is rationed there at three ounces a week for ordinary consumers with special rations of 12 oz. a week being allowed vegetarians and certain heavy workers who do not have canteen facilities. Seamen are permitted four ounces a week.

Q.—Is it necessary to follow the W.P.T.B. restrictions on clothing in re-make operations?

SUGAR COUPONS MAY OBTAIN CORN SYRUP

Mothers worried over inability to procure sufficient corn syrup for baby feeding under the preserves rationing now in force were reminded today by the Local Ration Board that they are entitled to exchange their babies' sugar ration coupons for preserve coupons to buy corn syrup for that purpose. The exchange may be made at a Local Ration Board to which the infant's ration book should be presented. The exchange is made at the rate of one sugar coupon for two "P" preserves coupons for corn syrup.

During his tour of the kitchen the sergeant tasted a fruit pie.

"What kind of pie is this?" he snapped, after swallowing the mouthful with an effort.

"What does it taste like?" asked the cook, hurt at the question.

"Putty!" snapped the sergeant.

"Then it's peach pie," said the cook bitterly. "The apple pie tastes like paraffin!"

Capital items: A through air service from Ottawa to Nassau, Bahamas Islands, via New York and Miami is heralded to commence very soon by Colonial Air-lines, Inc., with trip total flying time of 10 hours . . . Under direction of the Consumers Branch, W.P.T.B., I am told, wardrobes of children's made over clothing are being sent to a total of 108 centres in Canada. They offer a variety of new ideas, even to makeover experts like Canadian mothers, particularly in re-claiming apparently useless material and turning it into something wearable. Emphasis is placed on combinations of pretty colours, tailored smartness and on unusual ways of turning the total losses in the wardrobe into active garments. Included in the kits are several styles of children's underwear cut down from daddy's union suits. It's the first time in our country's dressmaking history that patterns have been available for children's underwear.

More than 14,000 Canadians in the Armed Forces serving in England have married English girls, believe it or not, according to a recent announcement. A lot of new moms will have to learn to bake apple pies.

Again Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner makes a special appeal that all farmers, especially those in the three prairie provinces (including other livestock shippers), co-operate in withholding from market, hogs, unfinished cattle and cows, and by spreading deliveries of bacon hogs and other classes of livestock as evenly as possible. The machinery rationing officials meeting in Regina, Sask., recently were concerned about many farmers selling still usable tractors in the hopes of getting new ones. While quotas have been increased there is just enough to meet needs of essentiality. The nearest rationing officer should be written to for a permit before any sale or deal or new purchase is made. The sale of second-hand machines at enhanced prices to secure permits for new equipment is considered "an unfair practice," the Board holds.

Canadian Pacific Women Fill Enlisted Men's Places

Invading such predominantly masculine strongholds as locomotive shops and maintenance of way gangs, women have been helping to take up part of the slack caused by the enlistment of 16,285 men in the active armed forces from the Canadian Pacific Railway. At the first of September this year there were 675 women employed by the Canadian Pacific in positions normally filled by men.

This layout shows some of the women at work. Giving the final touches to the top of a locomotive in the roundhouse at Sudbury, Ont., are Olive Kennedy cleaning up the number plate and Jennie Neil doing some other cleaning.

Smiling Vivian Constant, at the phone and silhouetted against the engine crew call board, is called "boy" for 77 crews in the locomotive shops at North Bay, Ont., while Mary Lemieux, pictured chalking up directions as a car checker, also works in North Bay where her father, Joe Lemieux, is a Canadian Pacific trainman.

Father-daughter combinations are not unusual now as demonstrated by the railroading Sauves of Sudbury in the picture where Fred Sauve, company boiler-maker, sees how close he can come to his daughter, Lucille Sauve, an engine wiper, with a bit of grease. The list of women doing men's jobs shows there are 294 on eastern lines and 171 in the West in the mechanical and operating departments while the communications department is using 210 girls as telegraph messengers.

Life In The C.W.A.C.

By Sgt. Joyce McKee

Dear Baba:

No time for frivolity these days! My "career" has caught up with me and I spend my time banging out write-ups about the life and times of the C.W.A.C. It is very stimulating to see the Canadian Women's Army Corps make the headlines but I could wish that everything did not have to happen at once, but that, I find, is all in the day's work to an army reporter. Either I have to smell out news like a ferret or it pours in with all the force of a gusher when I am already swamped.

C.W.A.C. lately have been doing a mighty fine job of filling the places vacated by men joining active training units. They are learning new trades and taking their places in army workshops as the skilled tradeswomen which the army so urgently requires. At the Canadian Ordnance Corps Training Centre in Barriefield, women in khaki are taking a course as instrument mechanics and learning the repair and maintenance of compasses, dial sights, range finders, telescopes, binoculars, etc. Some have even graduated as predictor mechanics which calls for skill and knowledge of the highest calibre, but you, my little cabbage, probably have never heard of a predictor and have not the foggiest idea what it is. Not very strange either for until recently predictors were a secret weapon and all mention of them was banned. Now, however, I am not violating any security measures.

In addition to instrument mechanics, C.O.C.T.C. has given courses to C.W.A.C. drivers, driver mechanics, textile refitters and one group of C.W.A.C. officers has taken the full course at the Ordnance School and qualified as ordnance officers. At the risk of bragging, I must confess that I think our girls are showing up well.

I am looking forward eagerly to next Sunday for my much needed rest cure and the end of the week always brings a reprieve. I like Sundays spent in the barracks. It is always so peaceful—later rising hour, time to linger over breakfast, an old failing of mine, you will remember. In fact I love lingering. This "on the double" stuff frays my nerves. When I am in the frame of mind to exercise the time-honoured army privilege of grousing, that is my pet complaint. When the war is over, I am going to sit under a fig tree all the day and play a flute, or perhaps I will find a retreat in the Deep South and live on watermelons. It does not really matter so long as it is a lazy life. Yes, I am shameless.

After breakfast all ranks attend Church Parade. During the summer, the Service was usually held on the wide veranda of Roselawn Barracks which is a lovely spot, shadowed by great trees with the cool sweep of lawns in the distance, a fitting "Church" for divine service, but now that it is cold we must resign ourselves to service in the recreation room of the new barracks. The army padre conducts the Service which is informal but impressive in its simple dignity. The hymns chosen are those with which most of us have been familiar from childhood and the prayers and sermon follow lines of thought closely affecting those in the services. I usually go away feeling "all's" right with the world.

The remainder of the day is ours to do with as we please. If I have the energy I go for a walk and wind-up at the C.W.A.C. canteen in Kingston for tea. Otherwise I stay in the barracks and write letters. With my wide circle of relatives, it takes much of my spare time to keep them posted. I have an exceptionally good book tucked away under my pillow to keep it safe from the predatory sergeants, so I will bring this screed to a close. The last time I started to read a mystery, it went through the hands of almost every sergeant in the Mess before I was allowed to finish it, so I am not taking a chance of having that happen again. Hope to see you in Toronto next weekend. Let's paint the town a mild red!

Charles Hoyt was entertaining a friend from New Hampshire. He obtained tickets for the opening performance of Clyde Fitch's "Nathan Hale," starring Nat Goodwin.

"Who's the star?" asked the man from New Hampshire, when Hoyt told him about the play.

"Nat Goodwin," Hoyt replied. "I don't want to see Goodwin," said the other. "I don't like him."

"You don't?" Hoyt asked. "No, I don't. I don't like him as a man; I don't like him as an actor, I detest him."

"But," assured Hoyt, "you'll like him in this play."

"No, I won't," said the friend. "Oh, yes you will," replied Hoyt with a smile. "They hang him in the last act."

SAVOURY STOCK POTS

Hello Homemakers! Thrifty grandmothers, whose wonderful soups we've heard so much about, had an ever-burning kitchen fire to work with. They could keep their stock pots on top of the stove because the constant heat was too high for the growth of dangerous bacteria.

Now, it is necessary to conserve every kind of fuel, but we need not worry about the soup pot — use low heat to draw out the flavour without boiling the liquor away, and then place it in the refrigerator to prevent spoilage and taste.

Meat flavour is the soul of a stock pot, so begin by collecting leftover bones from roasts, steaks, chops or poultry. (Buy a raw soup bone occasionally, but always have the butcher crack it for you.) Cover the bones with cold water, add drippings from roasts, steaks, sliced raw onion, raw carrots, celery and celery tops, parsley, a bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cover; bring to boiling point, simmer 1 to 1-2 hours. Strain; cool. Skim off fat that rises to top and use it for other cooking. Pour stock into a fruit jar, seal and store in the refrigerator.

RECIPES

Basic Supper Chowder

2 large potatoes, chopped or grated; 2 large onions, chopped or sliced; 1 pound hamburger, 1 quart milk, salt and pepper. Quick to make, delicious and inexpensive.

Cover the potatoes, onions, and hamburger with hot water, and simmer slowly until the potatoes are well cooked, about 20 minutes. Salt and pepper to taste, add milk, and heat thoroughly. (Add a little flour and water thickening if desired.)

Quick Split Pea Soup

2 cups green dried peas, quarts water, 2 small onions, chopped; 1 grated carrot, salt and pepper to taste, 1 bay leaf, 1-4 teaspoon thyme, 2 stalks chopped celery or 1-2 cup chopped celery tops. Mix the ingredients and boil for 20-25 minutes. Strain through sieve or colander; retreat and serve.

Thrifty Changes

Use leftover ham or chicken stock in place of water. Chopped bacon will give a delicious flavour for a change. A dash of cayenne pepper or pepper sauce if you like it. Garlic minced fine and added while cooking will be a good change, served with thinly sliced wieners on top. After straining, 1 cup thick tomato juice may be added. Hot milk or cream (about 1 c.) may be added.

Creamed Vegetable Soups

Delicious cream soups may be made from leftover or fresh cooked vegetables, such as peas, cabbage, spinach, beet tops, onions, or cauliflower. Press the vegetables through a sieve, and to each cupful of vegetable pulp add 2 cups milk. Heat to the boiling point, season with salt and pepper to taste, and thicken with a little flour — about 1 tablespoon flour and milk mixed to a smooth paste. Simmer for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add 1 tablespoon butter just before serving. This makes two large servings or three small servings.

Corn, cooked or fresh, may be used in the same way without pressing through a sieve.

TAKE A TIP

for the growth of bacteria, and once bacteria starts, spoilage can quickly result.

2. To keep your refrigerator stock pot safe, make sure that the broth is brought to the boiling point and put back in the refrigerator after cooling, about every two days, unless of course it is to be served.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. L.B. asks—Why do scalloped potatoes curdle?

Answer: When the oven temperature is above 325 degrees the fat and flour do not cook slowly enough from the milk if it boils.

Mrs. J.M. asks: How to mould cranberries without using much sugar.

Cranberry Salad
3-4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon gelatin, 2 cups cranberries, 1-4 cups water, 1 cup diced celery.

Cook cranberries in one cup of water until they are soft. Press through a sieve, add sugar, cook 5 minutes. Add gelatin softened in 1-4 cup water.

Services in the Nation's Capital

It is alleged that there are in this nation's capital buildings assessed at $68,500,000 free from taxation or paying next to nothing for essential municipal services that these buildings are getting no less than those buildings which are not free from taxation. As a result, there are signs of much dissatisfaction amongst Ottawa's municipal authorities who believe that this capital city is carrying too heavy a load and that the Federal Government should take over more financial obligations in order to provide Canada with a proper capital.

AIR FORCE GIRL

By Renée Shann

CHAPTER XII

Jane, a fashion artist, shares an apartment in London with Stella, a free lance journalist. Jane joins the WAAF. The night before entering service she walks through dim streets and collides with a flight lieutenant of the RAF. Stopping to break her engagement with Stella she discovers that the lieutenant, Timothy Poel-Sanders—nicknamed "Tips"—is Stella's divorced husband. Jane hears that Tips' squadron flies at 10 o'clock and that they are searching for him. She pedals to the home of Mrs. Stanton, where she finds the flier. He leaves at once. Mrs. Stanton accuses Jane of sending Tips to his death. Tips misses the flight from which Flight Lieutenant Stanton and Jimmie Stafford fall to return. Later, Stanton returns, as from the dead, and sees Tips kissing his wife at the gate. He threatens to divorce her. Stanton walks in on Tips after Tips has taken Jane for a drive and warns him to leave his wife alone. Tips advises Stanton not to get a divorce.

There came a glimmer of hope into Guy Stanton's eyes. "But there'll always be you standing between us," he said.

Tips paused again before replying. He was trying to prevent Guy from making a fool of himself "If you proceed," he said slowly and steadily, "I ought to make clear to you that even if the case succeeds, I shan't marry Iris."

Guy's hands clenched. He bent forward. "Why not?" he said.

"Because I don't love her. I've told you that. I know it's the honorable and decent thing to do in such circumstances even if, as in my case, there's no cause whatever for the divorce."

Guy stood up. He seemed a changed man. The strain had gone from his face. "I'm obliged to you," he said. "I think I understand things better now."

"And you'll do the best you can with Iris?"

"I will. I shall apply for a transfer. I think I can get it."

"Not a bad idea." Tips escorted him to the door and left him.

As Jane went back in her mind over the last few weeks, it seemed to her that she had been to blame all along. She had never given Tips a chance. Every time he tried to be sweet to her she'd snubbed him. It would be her fault if Guy brought this divorce. She'd thrown Tips into Iris Stanton's arms. She'd only herself to thank for what was happening.

She pressed her hands to her throbbing temples. If only she could sleep for a little while and forget. But now there was no time. Already the girls were beginning to rouse themselves. It was half-past three and at quarter to four they were needed until six-thirty.

Looking back on that particular spell of duty, as she emerged into the cold chill of a gusty dawn, Jane wondered how she had ever lived through it. The first thing she had heard as she'd taken her place was that the squadron that had gone out on a raid at midnight was returning, and that Flight Lieutenant Poel-Sanders, who had been acting Squadron Leader, was not among them!

Mechanically she'd done her job. Her brain had worked coolly and efficiently. But she'd felt as if she were dying. When the time had arrived for her to be relieved, she'd taken no notice at first of the girl standing at her elbow waiting to take her place. Blindly she'd risen to her feet and filed out with the rest of the girls who had been relieved. She couldn't go straight back to her billet. She wanted to be alone. She pushed her way beneath the wire fence that bordered the flying fields and now she was on the rough, stubby open space beyond. It was nothing new to her to hear the sound of an approaching plane engine. The drone of it, too, would have a rapid crescendo. Her numbed senses at first failed to realize that the roar had a staccato sound in it. It had a terrifying unevenness.

It was only when her eyes flew wide open with a sense of impending calamity that she turned. She saw a black shape hurtling toward her in the gloom. It was rocking and drunken in its movement. With a sob of fright she started instinctively to fling herself to the ground but the wing tip touched her, throwing her with terrific force to the earth, unconscious.

"Good morning, madam. It's a lovely day. Shall I pull the curtains?" "No, thank you, Ellen. At least, only a very little."

Ellen, Mary Leighton's trim little maid, set Iris' orange juice down beside the bed and went quietly out of the room. Iris had slept badly and her head ached. The day stretched drearily before her and she wondered how she would fill it. Not with thoughts of Tips, if she had any sense. He'd told her outright that he'd never been in love with her. He'd told her that even if Guy sued for a divorce and got it, he wouldn't marry her.

Looking back on that hour, she knew it had been her fault that they'd said such galling things to each other. She'd goaded him into them. She'd let herself down badly and she felt the hot color rush to her cheeks as she recalled the spiteful note that had been in her voice as she'd told him of her meeting with Jane Lambolt the previous night.

Oh, yes, she'd made it a good story. She'd allowed him to think Jane had been in that man's flat all night. She had, of course, gone very much too far. He hadn't believed her story of that nocturnal visit or at least he hadn't believed the implications she had given it.

Mary Leighton, up and dressed and about to go off to her job of war work, put her head in the door. After she had left, Iris slipped her orange juice and wondered how she could possibly get through the day.

Then she heard the telephone ring in the hall and Ellen going to answer it. Her heart gave a sudden leap. Tips! Tips calling to say he was sorry he'd been such a beast to her yesterday and he hadn't meant a word he'd said! She held her breath. She heard Ellen say, "If you'll hold on a moment, sir, I'll tell Mrs. Stanton you want her."

She was pulling her soft blue velvet dressing gown around her as Ellen knocked on the door. "There's a gentleman to speak to you, please, madam."

"Thank you, Ellen."

The telephone was in Mary's bedroom. Iris sat down heavily on the low divan bed and picked up the receiver. A gentleman to speak to her. . . . Ellen hadn't asked his name. . . . she should have done so. Still, there was only one gentleman likely to telephone to her. But she was wrong. "Is that you, Iris? This is Guy."

She could have cried with disappointment.

"Listen, Iris! I'm going to be in town today. I wonder if you'll meet me for lunch. There's something I rather badly want to talk over with you." There was a difficult, almost pleading note in Guy's voice.

Oddly enough, she found herself touched by it. She remembered quite suddenly what a ghastly time he'd had since the night of the big raid. She knew a quite surprising desire to make amends. After all, at one time she'd been very much in love with him. Perhaps if a day ever came when she could forget Tips. . . .

"Could you manage it, Iris? I'd be so glad if you would."

Her heart melted a little. There was a note in his voice that was almost her undoing. "All right, Guy. At what time shall we meet and where shall we go?"

"Shall we make it the Berkley at one o'clock?"

Iris kept Guy waiting for a quarter of an hour. She had looked at herself in the mirror after she'd finished speaking to him on the telephone and decided that she couldn't turn up looking as she'd been looking that morning. However, a couple of hours at a beauty parlor had made a different woman of her. It was a very finished and very lovely wife who arrived to meet Guy Stanton and gave him a cool little smile in greeting. "I'm sorry I'm late, Guy."

"That's all right. Shall we have a cocktail first?" said Guy.

She laughed lightly, a trifle mockingly. "I think that might help to make things a little easier. It's quite a time, isn't it, since we lunched out together?"

"You were surprised when I telephoned to you?"

"Very."

When the waiter had brought their cocktails and they were alone, Guy said quietly, "I saw Tips last night."

"Oh! Just the mention of his name threatened to unnerve her. She said, trying to keep her voice steady, "Was that your doing?"

"I'm afraid it was. Darling, I'm sorry. I just don't know what came over me the night I returned. Perhaps it was the fortnight I'd been through. It had been such sheer hell. I was so terribly looking forward to seeing you. Then when I came home and found you were away. . . . Iris, can you ever forgive me? I should never have doubted your word. You told me the truth and I didn't believe you. I know now. . . ."

He broke off, looking at her in mute appeal. She felt suddenly desperately sorry for him and for herself, too. "How do you know now, Guy?" she asked, her voice shaking a little.

"I've talked to Tips. I know when a man's speaking the truth."

She caught her breath swiftly. If only he realized how much that hurt her. If he only knew how she was visualizing that scene that must have taken place. "But you didn't believe me?" she said caustically.

His hand found her and held it. She allowed her own to remain passively within his grasp. For since Tips had finished with her perhaps she had better go back to Guy. She had an idea she would be very glad to. She didn't want to be alone in the world. Guy was saying, his voice low with emotion, "I know I didn't. But I was crazy that night, Oh, Iris, if we could only forget those last few weeks and start again!"

She met his eyes. She said hesitatingly, "You think it would be a success?" Because she felt perhaps it might be best to be honest, she added, "You remember I told you I was in love with Tips?"

A shadow crossed his eyes. The hope left them. Then it came back to them as he said quickly, urgently, "But you didn't mean it, Iris. You only said that because you were angry. At least, that's what I've been trying to tell myself ever since I talked to Tips last night. Oh, I know you're very fond of each other and that you're the best of good friends. But, Iris, please tell me, darling, that there was never anything more in it than that."

Iris met his eyes. "No—no, I don't suppose there was really," she said.

Guy told the waiter to reserve a table for lunch. He smiled at Iris and said this must be a celebration. He had forty-eight hours' leave from the airdrome. He could spend the time in town, and then—"I'll try to get transferred, I think, I don't know how you'll feel about it, but I'd like a change and I think it's very likely I'll be able to manage it."

Iris said eagerly that this was indeed something she wanted. The sooner they moved the better. If Guy would arrange it quickly. . . .

"I'll try, darling."

She put her hand in his with an impulsive little gesture. "Thank you, Guy. You're sweet. Far sweeter to me than I deserve, but I'll try after this to make our life together happier."

Stella got off the bus and told herself that for all the good she'd done she might as well have stayed at home, except that her new room depressed her. Since she had no work commissioned, she had known it would be extremely difficult to settle down to anything. So she'd set off that morning to storm the offices of the various editors with whom in the past her work had been so popular. There was nothing doing. No one wanted to buy any articles, short stories or serials. From the look of things, they'd never feel in a buying mood again.

She hurried along the street now and slipped her key in the lock of her new home. She was greeted by Mrs. Blake, the landlady, with the news that there had been three telephone calls for her while she was out. A young lady called Miss Sparks had called up. "She said she'd ring again. Ah, there goes the bell! Maybe that'll be her now. I said as you'd be home before very long, I thought." And after a moment, "Yes, it is for you, Miss."

Numerous Stories
Numerous stories have been heard behind the scenes along Parliament Hill about possible appointments to the Senate where for a long time the Government has had many vacancies to fill, including seats in this Upper House from four of the Provinces, with one story being that, if a Federal Cabinet change is made prior to any sudden call for a general election, these vacancies might prove useful for one or more Ministers of the Federal Cabinet who may possibly go to the Senate, especially in view of some of the rumours along this line which have been circulating for a long time.

Two women were discussing a mutual acquaintance.

"She has very magnetic personality," said one.

"She ought to have," said the other, "everything she has on is charged."

TEACH PUBLIC CITIZENSHIP CANADA'S ROLE IN EMPIRE DREW'S PLAN FOR SCHOOLS

Premier George A. Drew spoke in the capacity of Minister of Education at the opening night meeting of the Education Week, Monday night at Convocation Hall, Toronto, and outlined the reforms the Government is planning on the educational field.

"Every Canadian should be taught an intense love of Canada," he said, but he urged that "our children should be taught the place of Canada in the larger British partnership and the increasingly important role Canada will play in moulding the destiny of the British people everywhere throughout the world."

As essential elements of a good education, he mentioned training of body, training of character and training in habits of clear thought and clear expression of thoughts in words.

Study Use of Films

The government is exploring the possibility of extending the educational system by the use of sound film and gramophone records in the schools to aid in teaching speech, music, physics and other subjects, he stated. Some scientific equipment might not be available until after the war, "but we are exploring the possibility and as soon as production can be diverted to equipment of this nature plans will be ready to extend our educational system along these lines."

Greater emphasis will be placed on the teaching of history, not as a cold record of dead people and dead events, but as a living picture of the past.

Physical training and mental training must go hand in hand and in assuring physical health as part of the system of education the government plans to go beyond medical and dental inspection.

Benefits For Teachers

The role of the teacher in moulding society must be fully recognized and steps have already been taken for the purpose of establishing a more satisfactory basis of salary and continuity of employment, but, the Premier warned, these objectives cannot be accomplished overnight.

"There is always some danger of looking upon the school curriculum and the organization by which that curriculum is put into effect as the end in itself and not merely the means to an end," said the Premier. "I would not presume to outline the details of organization until after there has been full consultation with teachers and the highly skilled officials of the Department of Education. But I do not hesitate to express my own belief in certain fundamental principles which should be borne in mind in revising the details of our system from time to time."

Educating children for citizenship was dealt with extensively by Premier Drew. There was convincing evidence that Canadian men and women should have clearer conception of the basic institutions of Canada, of Ontario and of the municipalities in which they live, he declared. In teaching children every advantage should be taken of all the developments of science, and the authorities should avail themselves of every device which will extend the contact of the individual teacher without destroying the value of the personal relationship.

New History Method

Speaking about teaching of history, the Premier stressed the value of the use of color film. "The re-enactment of important episodes in the building of Canada and the recording of those episodes in pictures for the schools, will arouse new interest in the localities where the events took place and make it possible to impress those events upon the minds of our children through the powerful influence of a clear pictorial record," he said.

Amazing But True

About the middle of last month, it is amazing but true that the 620th ship had slid into the water as a result of Canada's shipbuilding efforts in this World War II, though before this war this country had not built a single ship since World War I. So far in this World War II, up to the time of the launching of the 620th ship, Canadian shipbuilders have stunned the world by their accomplishments which have included the construction of 215 cargo ships and 405 others as well as more than 4,000 smaller craft. Then again, over 5,000 cargo ships have been made fit for service by repairs and these have provided another 20,000 gross tons of shipping.

Hasty's P's O. C. Among Boldest Heroes of 8th

Slogging ahead through two mountain thunderstorms and in the stickiest sort of going those fighting men from Eastern Ontario, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, have captured another Italian town.

One of the boldest fighting men of the 8th Army personally led that attack, Lieut-Colonel H. D. Graham, of the Hasty P's, and his heroism in this, as in other assaults, was outstanding.

I had a talk with the Colonel, but he had little to say about himself or the dangers he has faced. In fact, in the midst of our conversation, he was advised that a company of his men was in a difficult spot and he was off like a shot to investigate the situation personally.

When the Hasty P's took this town they travelled light and fast. They drove out the Nazis with speed and thoroughness and then were driven to cover when the Hienies, some miles ahead, opened up with their 88-mm's and other big stuff.

Superhuman Task

Miles back of the Hasty P's at the moment was the rations party: through storms and shellfire the infantry had done their job, and now they must be fed. So the rations party, not to be outdone, tackled the superhuman task.

Under Captain Paul O'Gorman, and with a covering party led by Lieut. Paul Makepeace, mules were loaded, for in this going no vehicle would budge, and the difficult mountainous trip commenced. Mud collected on the feet of men and mules until both looked as if they were wearing snowshoes. But on they went.

As they climbed higher, the rain became heavier and the footing more dangerous, and several times men and mules went down. Then the Hun opened up and stray shells further tortured their advance. Finally they made amidst the welcoming cheers of the Hasty P's and the commendation of their officers.

Names of some of the men in the party were: Sgt. Gordon Pemberton, Port Hope; Cpl. Arthur Clapp, Picton; Corp. Stewart Eckford, Toronto; Privates D. O. White, Stanley Scruby and Harry Scarlett, of Trenton; Pte. Watts, Oshawa; Donald Ashley, Picton; Ernest Page, Toronto; Ernest Marion, Belleville, and G. C. Penny, of Nova Scotia.

8th Army Infantry coming down the steps from landing craft

Men Praise Colonel

"That party did a grand job and are worthy of all the praise given them," said Capt. Ralph Cleworth, of Oakville, as I talked with him at the roadside in the rain. "The colonel led the battalion in person, and I can tell you he is beloved by all the men in the regiment."

Captain Frank Hammond, of Pembroke, and in charge of the antitank support, laughingly said that his crew was usually on the ground first, but not this time.

Rain, mud, mountains, rivers, demolitions and Huns all are taken in their stride by the men of the 8th Army, and, like old man river, they keep rolling along.

ALL SERVICE CHARGES OFF FARM HYDRO BILLS

A uniform power rate for all rural consumers in Ontario, elimination of service charges to all farmers who are primarily producers, and a reduction of all service charges to all remaining rural consumers, was announced Monday by Premier George Drew.

Changes in the rate structure will mean that rural power consumers will save $527,500 a year, it was stated.

The new rates are to become effective January 1st next, and are made in simplifying the whole Hydro rate structure, reducing cost of power to about 129,000 out of 133,000 rural consumers.

Under the change a rural consumer's average Hydro bill in high rate districts will be $2.74, as compared with $4.31 previously, and compared with the monthly bill in low rate districts of $2.92.

The change does not affect urban consumers. Under the plan 120 rural power districts are amalgamated into one provincial rural power district, and it reclassifies service customer classifications.

Mr. Drew said as a result of Hydro's growth and use in rural districts the rural rate structure has become complicated and confusing.

Specimen Rates

The new rates on monthly bills of farmers to a standard form customer who uses 100 kilowatt-hours per month, show the following: Present monthly bill in high-rate districts, $4.31; present monthly bill in low-rate districts, $2.92; new proposed rate in high-rate districts, $2.74.

A hamlet consumer using 60 kilowatt-hours per month would have the following bills: Present monthly bill in high-rate district, $3.16; present monthly bill in low rate district, $2.21; under new proposed rate in high-rate district, $2.23.

"The Government now proposes to simplify the whole rate structure," he said. "The service charge which now applies to primary producers will be completely eliminated and rates made uniform for all rural services supplied after January 1st next. The new rates give the greatest reduction where they are most needed, that is, to those living in high-rate districts."

To attain desired results all rural power districts will be combined into district and a rate structure provides to this end. The Hydro Commission will adopt a uniform kilowatt-hour rate for all classes of service in rural areas running from four cents per kilowatt-hour to 75 cents. These rates will be subject to the usual ten per cent discount.

Farm service will be charged on these kilowatt-hour rates without any service charge. A minimum monthly bill of $2.25 gross will be adopted for the standard farm. For larger farms suitable blocks and minimum bills have been devised.

In hamlet service for the small lighting consumer the rate structure will be a service charge of 55 cents a month. A minimum monthly bill of $1.50 gross is set out.

RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN BRIDGE STREET UNITED CHURCH

Something new in conferences which is coming to be known as Rural Life Conferences is being arranged by local committees reaching from Renfrew to Bowmanville. Such conferences have been held with great success in Western Ontario and are now being extended to Eastern Ontario. They are undenominational and interdenominational and non-political and are entirely a co-operative venture by all individuals, churches and any other rural organizations that are interested in the permanent betterment of rural life. Their main purpose is to enable rural people to understand and interpret their own rural institutions.

Bridge Street United Church, the place of the Conference to be held in Belleville, on December 1st, has been made available by the generosity of Dr. J. Semple, the minister, and the Church officials. The main part of the program will include addresses and three discussion groups on such subjects as "The Rural Church", "The Canadian Confederation of Agriculture and Farm Radio Forums," and "Post-war Reconstruction." All the sessions will be wide open to the public generally and city people will be especially welcome.

Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp, of New York, U.S.A., the main conference speaker, is national director of the Town and Country Department of the Congregational Christian Churches. He is a member of the Rural Sociological Society, Farm Economics Association, Agricultural History Society, National Catholic Rural Life Conference, etc. His writings include, "The Farmer's Search for Economic Democracy," "Characteristics of the Rural Family," and "Rural Poverty and Rural Morale." His address in the evening will be, "The Judgment of History in Rural America."

The meeting of this conference in Belleville is a fine opportunity for all to learn what people are doing and thinking, in those areas which lie outside the city limits.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario.

Q.—As a member of a hospital board, I am much interested in food supplies for those institutions. How do they stand in regard to the distribution of canned vegetables?
A.—Hospitals are given a priority under the system of distribution now in force and it is hoped that by this means their requirements will be adequately met.
Q.—Is there any price ceiling on hairdressers' services?
A.—Most distinctly. Unless specific authorization has been received to increase such prices, a hairdresser cannot charge more for his or her services than was charged during the basic period in 1941.
Q.—My small son complains that certain chocolate bars do not seem to be as large as they used to be. Is there nothing that can be done about this?
A.—A late order of the Prices

DEAR FRIENDS,—

We want to say "Thank you" to our many customers who have been so understanding and co-operative during the present shortage of many favorite foods.

As you know, our supply has been cut and we have sincerely tried to divide fairly: first, among our regular customers who have been with us for a long time, and then among our new friends who have paid us the compliment of coming to our store.

When ever we are obliged to say "No" to you when you ask for certain hard to get foods, we hope you will understand it hurts us more than it does you.

There are many foods yet unrationed and we have a fair supply of most of them. We shall be glad to help you select the best values.

We shall continue to do our best toward rendering a satisfactory wartime shopping service and intend to keep our store a friendly, cheerful place to trade, come what may.

You are always welcome.

Board requires manufacturers of all confections to give the same weight as they gave during the basic period of 1941 and to specify the weight of the bar on the wrapper. If you have reason to believe that there has been any change in such weight, please report to the nearest office of the Board.

Q.—How can I tell when ration coupons fall due?

A.—Ration coupon calendars appear in most newspapers from month to month and should be clipped by consumers for reference. A good many newspapers also provide a weekly ration coupon calendar as a service to consumers. The same information is readily obtainable in nearly all retail stores.

Q.—In view of the fact that quotas for domestic slaughtering of hogs have been suspended, am I still required when slaughtering for the trade to hold slaughtering permit?

A.—Yes. The suspension in question has not altered the slaughtering regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. You must still hold a permit to engage in slaughtering for the meat trade.

Q.—I expect a number of men to stay for some days at my farm while engaged in wood-cutting. Can I secure extra rations for them?

A.—Yes. Extra ration allowances for temporary help on farms during the winter months, where necessary, may be obtained by making application to your Local Ration Board, as was the case with temporary help during the harvesting season.

TRENTON'S SOLDIER'S LEG IS AMPUTATED IN ITALY

Wounded in Italy and later reported seriously ill, parents of Sergeant Geo. Ferguson, Trenton, have now been advised that their son has had to have a leg amputated.

He went overseas in July, 1941, a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and shortly after his arrival in England was wounded in the hand by an exploding shell. He recovered sufficiently to accompany the regiment when it left for Sicily.

A brother of Sergt. Ferguson, Pte. Albert Ferguson, is serving with the Cameron Highlanders overseas.

VALUABLE EGGS

Hello Homemakers! Eggs are eggs these days! The cold weather has made the hens "climb into their shell"—few eggs are available yet. Frankly, I think we were spoiled with such easy-to-prepare products. A cook never feels really stuck if she has a few eggs and a few ordinary staples.

Eggs gives us a liberal supply of body-building and tissue-building proteins, also a good amount of the vitamins which protect us from the weakness and nervousness. Eggs that are properly cooked are easily digested. With this in mind, the wise mother will see that her busy little run-about of 3 to 12 years of age gets the eggs simply cooked (coddled or poached). Then here are the recipes to use when eggs are scarce.

RECIPES

3-4 cup cocoa, 1 tsp. soda, 1-2 cup cake flour, sifted, 3-4 cup salt, 1 cup brown sugar (packed), 1 cup sour milk or buttermilk, 1-2 cup shortening, melted, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Sift cocoa, flour, soda and salt together; add brown sugar and mix well. Add sour milk, melted shortening and vanilla. Beat until smooth, then add melted shortening, shallow pan, and bake in electric oven, 350-375 degrees F. about 30 minutes.

Basic Spice Cake

1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup water, 1-2 cup shortening, 2 cups seeded raisins, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1-2 tsp. each nutmeg, allspice and cloves, 2 cups cake or pastry flour, sifted, 1 tsp. soda, 1-2 tsp. baking powder. Boil the sugar, water, shortening, raisins, spices and salt together for 3 minutes, stirring continually. Cool. Sift flour, soda and baking powder together, and gradually stir into batter and beat well. Bake in greased cake pan in electric oven, 300-325 degrees F. for about one hour.

Creamy Custard

2 tbsps. cornstarch, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 egg, well beaten, 1-8 tsp. salt, 2 cups scalded milk, 1-2 tsp. vanilla.

Mix the cornstarch, sugar, egg and salt. Gradually pour over the scalded milk, stirring until thick or smooth. Continue cooking 15 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Add vanilla and chill. Serve with cream.

Old Fashioned Rice Pudding

1-2 cup rice, uncooked, 1 qt. milk, 1-2 tsp. salt, 1-2 cup sugar, brown or white, 1-4 tsp. nutmeg, 1 cup raisins.

Wash the rice, add milk, salt, and had taken this necessary legal measure in deferring this Bill on account of the war but it has been a lively subject of dispute in political circles in the Province of Quebec whose Premier and others had been opposed originally to deferring the Redistribution Bill even in wartime. These protests proved of no effect in stopping the Government's plan to delay this Bill but this has brought into existence a sharp political issue in Quebec, with the likely indirect effects possessing untold possibilities of repercussions. On the basis of the last census upon which redistribution of seats in Parliament depended under the British North America Act of 1867, the Province of Quebec would have retained its 65 members in a reduced total membership from 245 to 238 since from 1931 to 1941, the year of the last census, Quebec's population had increased by 457,220 and it reached 3,331,882, meaning an increase of 15.90 per cent and giving that province a member for every 51,213 of the population as against the present scale of one member for each 44,186.

Non-War Costs

Much has been said or written lately about this year's steadily increasing and unprecedented costs of this World War II to Canada's comparatively small population. It has been true that these war costs in this fiscal year have been almost unbelievable but it must also not be forgotten that Canada's total estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year for non-war purposes had been reported to be no less than $654,514,427.

Curtailed Supplies

There is no doubt that there is invariably a rush of certain people to obtain liquor when more money is in circulation in Canada so that this is likely to strain the supplies of domestic or imported liquor in this country at certain times. Now, it is revealed in the nation's capital that the liquor commissions or boards in the various provinces are co-operating closely with the scheme of allowing a little more than two-thirds of the usual supply. In fact, it is reported that under the scheme in the year ending October 31, 1943, as far as domestic products are concerned, Quebec will have obtained the largest quantity, that is 954,064 gallons in comparison with 945,413 gallons for Ontario and the smallest quantity will have been received by New Brunswick, 61,851 gallons. In the same twelve months of last year, however, Quebec obtained 1,370,091 gallons, Ontario 1,352,019 gallons, and New Brunswick, 88,359 gallons. Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia will have received domestic liquor in this period of 1943 of 74,500, 105,320, 101,055, and 267,620 gallons respectively.

SUGAR, and nutmeg. Turn into greased baking dish or casserole, and bake in electric oven at 275 degrees for 2 hours. Stir with a fork occasionally. Add raisins, and bake about 30 minutes longer. Instead of baking this pudding may be cooked in the top of a double boiler with less heat and in a shorter time; it should cook until the rice has absorbed all the milk. Serve hot or cold.

TAKE A TIP

For variations of Basic Spice Cake: (1) Add 1 tsp. almond extract and 1-2 cup blanched almonds; (2) Add 1 cup chopped raisins, 2 tbsps. chopped citron, 1 tsp. grated orange rind, and 1-2 cup broken nut meats for a delicious fruit cake.

For variations of Rice Pudding: (1) Soak 2-3 cup dried apples or peaches; slice and use in place of raisins; (2) Use as substitute 1 cup orange juice for 1 cup milk with a little grated orange rind.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. F. C. W. asks: At what temperature should the oven be and how long should one cook a 6, 4 and 2 pound fruit cake?

Answer: Bake 4 hours in a very slow oven (275 degrees) and place a small pan of water in the oven. Or, pans may be covered with 2 layers of waxed paper (tie in place) and steam 2 hours, then bake 2 hours in oven at 300 degrees.

Mrs. M. B. asks: Ingredients for our dark fruit cake published 2 years ago.

Dark Fruit Cake

1-2 cup butter, 3-4 cup brown sugar, 3-4 cup seeded raisins cut in pieces, 3-4 cup currants (or raisins), 1-2 cup citron, thinly sliced and cut in strips, 1-2 cup molasses, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon each, allspice and mace, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1-2 teaspoon lemon extract.

MILK CONTROL BOARDS GIVEN AUTHORITY TO ADJUST MILK PRICES

Of interest to all those engaged in the sale of fluid milk is the announcement that the Food Administration of the Prices Board, with the concurrence of its chairman, has authorized Milk Control Boards throughout the Dominion to adjust the price of milk up to 10c per quart without each individual case being submitted to the Board for its consideration and approval.

In granting this authority, however, the Board reserves the right to question any such adjustment if it is not accompanied by proper justification and it has also expressed the opinion that, save in exceptional cases, the price adjustment should not exceed one cent per quart as it is desirous of maintaining its established policy of rigid price control.

The purpose of the notice that has been sent to Milk Control Boards is to enable them, without undue delay, to adjust specific or maximum retail prices for milk that are necessary to ensure an adequate supply in different markets.

WOMAN LOSES LIFE SAVING CHILDREN

Trying to save the two children who were with her on the path of an oncoming passenger train, Mrs. Norval Kenney, of Brighton, was killed by a CNR westbound train in Brighton Saturday afternoon. The 45-year-old woman along with her own child and a grandchild were coming south across the tracks, taking a short cut after visiting a neighbor. Apparently she did not see the train coming, although Wilfred Ferguson, of Brighton, was waiting at the crossing nearby until it had passed.

CHAPTER XIII

Jane, a fashion artist, shares an apartment in London with Stella, a free lance journalist. Jane joins the W.A.A.F. The night before entering service she walks through dim streets and collides with a flight Lieutenant of the RAF. Stopping to break her engagement with Stella she discovers that the Lieutenant, Timothy Pook-Candlers—nicknamed "Tips"—is Stella's divorced husband. Jane hears that Tips' squadron flies at 10 o'clock and that they are searching for him. She pedals to the home of Mrs. Stanton, where she finds the flier. He leaves at once. Mrs. Stanton accuses Jane of sending Tips to his death. Tips misses the flight from which Flight Lieutenant Stanton and Jimmie Stafford fall to return. Later, Stanton returns, as from the dead, and sees Tips kissing his wife at the gate. He threatens to divorce her, Stanton walks in on Tips after Tips has taken Jane for a drive and warns him to leave his wife alone. Tips advises Stanton not to get a divorce. Stanton thanks him for his advice and promises to do the best he can with his wife, Iris. He calls Iris up, but she acts disappointed.

ed. However, she agrees to meet him at Berkeley's, where the couple agree to forgive and forget. When Stella returns to her apartment she learns that there were three telephone calls for her while she was out, one from a young lady called Miss Sparks.

Stella took the receiver. "Hello, yes? This is Miss Carruthers speaking." A pleasant voice explained that Stella wouldn't know its owner's name. "I'm ringing up about Jane Lambert. I believe she's a great friend of yours." "Jane? Why, yes!" Stella's voice sharpened and her heart beat more quickly in sudden apprehension. "Is anything wrong?"

Mrs. Blake standing on the stairs, listened wide-eyed and deeply interested to the one-sided conversation that followed. Miss Carruthers' friend had had an accident and been taken to the hospital. The wing of an airplane had knocked her down and she was still unconscious. Mrs. Blake shook her head.

Stella replaced the receiver. She told Mrs. Blake that she was going out again at once. Yes, her greatest friend had had a serious accident. She was going to her immediately.

"Is she far away, miss?" "Yes, some little distance unfortunately. I'll take me about an hour to get there."

It took her just under. She was lucky in having only a very few minutes to wait at Victoria Station. There was just time to telephone Rupert and tell him that she couldn't dine with him that evening. It's Jane, Rupert. There's been an accident. She's badly hurt."

The quick concern in Rupert's voice touched her heart. "Darling, I'm so sorry. Can I do anything?" "I don't think so. I'll telephone you this evening, if you're likely to be at your apartment, and tell you when I'll be coming back to town. I just don't know quite what I shall do until I get there. If it's really serious I shall want to stay."

"If it's really serious, will you telephone to me and let me come down and be with you?"

Stella promised she would. She hung up the receiver, and leaned for a moment against the side of the telephone booth, thinking how grateful she was to be able to turn to Rupert in her anxiety.

The girl who had telephoned—Sparks, she'd said was her name—had sounded so dreadfully concerned about what had happened. She'd heard of Stella from Jane and, when the accident had happened, had guessed that Jane would want her to be told. She'd called the Duke Street apartment first, that being the telephone number that she'd found among Jane's papers—and had then been given Mrs. Blake's number.

Stella hurried up the steps of the hospital and found the inquiry office. She asked for Jane. After some little delay the man traced her. "That would be the young lady who's a Waaf, miss?" he asked with friendly interest.

"Yes. She's a great friend of mine. I'm terribly anxious to know how she is and to see her if it's possible."

She waited while inquiries were made. It was an agonizing few minutes. Supposing the worst had happened? A hundred fears haunted her. The man struck his head through the little cubbyhole of his office. "She's on the third floor, miss. If you will go up, the nurse will see you."

Stella took the elevator. She emerged into a long wide corridor, shining with cleanliness and smelling faintly of disinfectant. A nurse came toward her. She was an elderly woman, with a kindly sympathetic smile. "You want to inquire about Miss Lambert?"

"Please. She has no relations. I'm really the nearest person to her. I've been so dreadfully worried."

The nurse smiled reassuringly. Briefly she told Stella what had happened and went on. "The officer who was in the plane has been quite beside himself with anxiety. I'm expecting him back at any moment. Poor man, he's been here on and off nearly all day. He's most terribly upset, though of course there isn't the slightest blame attached to him."

Stella could well imagine how he must be feeling. "Is it possible to see her?" she asked.

The nurse shook her head. "I think perhaps it would be better to wait just a little while. If you would care to sit in the waiting room downstairs—no, that's such a cheerless place. Come in here, this is my sitting room. Please do make yourself at home."

"Thank you. You're very kind." The nurse closed the door upon her. Stella walked to the window and looked down on the street below. She stood there quite still, praying for Jane's recovery. She didn't like the door behind her open. Only as it closed again was she aware of any sound. She turned and her breath caught in her throat. "Tips!"

"Stella." They stared at each other. They said simultaneously, "What are you doing here?"

Stella said, "Jane's my dearest friend."

Tips looked as if he couldn't believe it. "Why didn't she tell me?" Stella felt the color creep into her cheeks. "That was my fault. I didn't want her to. I—just sort of thought I'd rather you didn't know where I was. I had an idea that if Jane told you she and I were such friends, you might feel you ought to do something about me."

"Oh, Stella!" There was a wealth of reproach in his voice.

Stella said gently, "I'm sorry, Tips. I wish now I'd let her tell you. I wish I ran a hand back over my hair." Tips ran a hand back over his hair. "I'm beginning to see now what must have happened. That was why she suddenly changed. At first she was sweet to me and it was all plain sailing—or looked like it. It was going to be. Then one night when I dined with her she was utterly different. That must have been when she'd discovered that you and I had been married."

His eyes darkened. "I take it you didn't give me a very good character?" Stella said desperately, and as she felt, wholly inadequately, "I'm sorry, Tips. Oh, Tips, please don't look at me like that. I didn't know that you and she—"

He laughed shortly. "My dear Stella, she wouldn't have anything to do with me. I fell in love with her the first moment I saw her." Stella went to him and laid a hand on his arm. "It will be all right, Tips dear. I feel quite sure it will be. You, I take it, were in the machine that hurt her?"

"Yes, I had a good hit of it shot away and only just managed to get back. As it was, I couldn't quite make it. I landed on the rough ground outside the airframe. I'd no time to think that anyone would be walking there. And I never saw her. I didn't know it had happened till they came running along to tell me." His voice broke.

Stella looked at him pityingly. Time ticked slowly away. The nurse came in at last and said that there were signs of returning consciousness. She'd tell them at once if there were any real change. . . . she went away again and they were left alone together. Tips looked across at Stella. "What's been happening to you, these last few years?"

She told him briefly what she'd been doing, of her meeting with Jane and their subsequent joining up together. "You're not married again?"

"No, but I think I'm going to be." "I'm glad. I'd like to think you'll be happy. Who is he, Stella?"

"A man called Rupert Grant. I've known him for some years." A warm glow ran through her as she said these words. It was odd how quite suddenly she knew that now she had met Tips again she could marry Rupert. She'd been in love with a dream and now she had awakened. "And you, Tips? What's been happening to you?"

"Nothing very much, until I met Jane."

She went back across the years and asked a question, bringing back to their minds a time that both wanted to forget but knowing that after this once it would never be mentioned again. "What happened to Fay, Tips?"

A shadow crossed his face. "She died."

"Oh, Tips!" "The man she was engaged to chucked her when the divorce went through, even though her name wasn't brought in. She was run down at the time and she became very ill. I don't really think she wanted to live."

Stella looked at him bleakly. What could she say, she asked herself? To tell him she was sorry was so desperately inadequate. "You were wrong about Fay and me, Stella," he said quietly. "I told you that once before and you wouldn't believe me."

"I just don't know what to say, Tips."

"That's all right."

"I was such a little fool in those days."

"We were both rather young. Maybe that was what was wrong with us."

She held out her hand to him. "Can we be friends now?"

He took the hand and held it tightly for a moment. "Of course, my dear."

"Thank you, Tips. That's very generous of you."

There was the sound of footsteps in the corridor and the door opened. The nurse smiled from one to the other. She recovered consciousness and Doctor Davidson is feeling most confident about her. I wonder which of you would like to see her first?"

Stella hesitated. Tips said, "You go first, Stella."

Stella followed the nurse down the long corridor into a private room where they had put Jane. She looked as white as the snowy coverlet, a handkerchief round her head, a little dark curl showing. She gave Stella a faint smile. "Darling how nice of you to come!"

Stella bent and kissed her. Jane felt for Stella's hand and held it. "I'm going to be all right. Have you seen Tips, darling?"

"Yes, I've just had a long talk with him."

Stella felt Jane's fingers tighten convulsively in her own. Whatever happened she mustn't let Stella see how it affected her. Besides, she had to be glad for Stella's sake.

But instead Stella was saying gently, "I'm going to marry Rupert, Jane."

"Oh, Stella! But Tips . . . I always thought you were still in love with him?"

Stella shook her head. "So did I. But I'm not, darling."

Jane closed her eyes after Stella had left her. She was feeling so much happier. Because now, if Stella didn't want Tips—

The door opened again. She heard the nurse's quiet voice. "Please remember she's already just had one visitor. She mustn't talk too much."

"Oh, Jane." He held her close to him, then stood looking down at her. "The figure in the carpet, Jane. You've got to admit at last that you can't get away from it."

Jane reached up a hand and drew him down to her again. "I want to. I never did really. But I was just scared."

But as he kissed her again she knew that she needn't be frightened any longer. Tips loved her and would always love her. From now on, despite the war, despite all that might happen, they were on the threshold of a new life together.

MAIL SERVICE TO ITALY

Concern by many people over the apparent delay of the mail service to Canadians taking part in the campaign in Italy, has brought forth the following statement by the Postmaster-General:

"The Canadian Forces proceeding to the Mediterranean theatre assembled at a British port and mail was delivered to the Canadian Postal Corps, through the co-operation of the Royal Navy, up to the time the last boat in the convoy left the port. After the departure of the convoy all mail for the troops in the Mediterranean theatre had to be 'frozen' for security reasons until the official announcement was made of the invasion of Sicily on July 10. The first despatch for Sicily was made by air on July 10, and the first despatch of surface mail, consisting of about 1,200 bags was made on July 18. Surface mail must be despatched in convoys and the elapsed time between the United Kingdom and the Mediterranean theatre is approximately 21 days. The parcel mails posted in Canada in June, which had to be held in England for security reasons, were, therefore, not delivered in the Mediterranean area until August 10."

The Postmaster-General also stated that operational difficulties have to be contended with. For example, he says, the steamer carrying mails for the Canadian forces in the Mediterranean in the next maintenance convoy was damaged by enemy action and had to put into the nearest port for repairs.

Regarding mail from Sicily to Canada, the Postmaster-General revealed that the boat carrying the mail was forced out of the convoy by operational trouble and it had to make for the nearest port. This was in the first week of August and when the boat was finally ready to sail it was sent on an operational trip and finally docked at Algiers early in October with the mail still on board.

Now that matters have become more or less stabilized in the Mediterranean area, surface letters can be delivered from Canada to the United Kingdom in 20 days, and from there to Italy in another 30 days. "Blue" air letters take six days to reach the United Kingdom and five days from the United Kingdom to Italy.
